Taft, Fearing Arms Tie-in, May Oppose Atlantic Pact

Can He Support Treaty and Not Vote For Military Aid? Senator Demands

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) hinted yesterday he may join the thin line of Senators opposing the North Atlantic defense treaty.

His tentative support of the treaty wavered following a sharp floor dispute over whether the treaty commits the United States to supply arms to Europe.

Following the debate, the Senate GOP helmsman told reporters he has not yet made up his mind but he "might" vote against the pact.

"Frankly, I am absolutely opposed to providing arms for Europe," he told the Senate earlier. "What interests me is whether I can vote for the treaty and not vote for arms."

Good Majority Still Expected

Possibility that the Ohioan may now buck the treaty, even swinging with him some Republican votes, failed to shake leadership forecasts that the pact will be overwhelmingly ratified.

Granting Taft swung 'every doubtful Republican, floor strategists said the "No" vote could not conceivably exceed 15, and is more likely to conform with their original forecast of "fewer than ten."

The arms dispute had the effect of prolonging the debate, however. Leadership spokesmen, who had hoped to ratify the treaty on Monday, now conceded the vote may not come before Wednesday. The Senate took its normal recess over Saturday and Sunday.

Senate Foreign Relations Chairman Tom Connally (D., Tex.), who with Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.) has repeatedly assured colleagues they would not be personally "obligated" to vote for arms, said he would not seek any further statement on that score from the Secretary of State.

"I don't see how we can give the Senate any more reassurance than we have," said the Texan.

Connally meanwhile announced that his Senate Foreign Relations Committee will go right ahead with hearings on the $1,450,000,000 arms program following ratification of the pact. House leaders had previously announced a similar intention.

"If we can, we would like to put it (the arms bill) through at this time and get it over with," Connally told reporters. "But we are

Truman Plans Output Goal of $300 Billion

Message Monday Expected to Offer Jobless Formula

By Sterling F. Green
Associated Press Reporter

President Truman will set a lofty production goal for America in his forthcoming message to Congress, it was reported yesterday.

Persons in close touch with the framing of economic policy predict he will call for the output of some 300 billion dollars in goods and services a year. This would be 18 per cent above the present rate.

The President is expected to emphasize that solid prosperity and high employment must be built on a constantly rising national productivity.

The message, due on Capitol Hill Monday, is a semi-annual report required by law, but this one has attracted much attention because of anxiety over declining economic trends.

The reported production target deals with total rate of output of goods and services, or what economists call the "gross national product."

Of high importance, its achievement would call for a reversal of today's downward production curve. Gross output dropped 11 billion dollars in the first quarter of this year from the $264,900,000,000 rate attained in late 1948.

The President will stress anew, it was stated, that the economy is healthy and still running close to the all-time peak rate of last year.

But the message will take sober note of the rise in unemployment in recent months. It will recommend measures which Mr. Truman believes will not only spur long-term growth but prevent the localized aches and pains of joblessness from becoming a grave and chronic ailment.

Further, it was learned that at least eight Democrats in the Senate will follow up Mr. Truman's message by introducing the eighth and final version of a proposed Baker was released yesterday after arraignment before United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence under $5000 bond on two charges of arson, one on behalf of the owner of the building and one preferred by the fire marshal's office. The case will go to the grand jury.

The other man held on a charge of arson is William P. Corley, 517 K st. ne., night manager of the grill, who yesterday was transferred from Casualty Hospital to the detention ward at Gallinger Hospital.

Housing Bill Is Passed, Goes To President

'Fair Deal' Wins First Big Victory In the 81st Congress

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

President Truman yesterday won his first major "Fair Deal" victory in the Eighty-first Congress when both Houses finally approved the Administration's housing bill, largest in the Nation's history.

The measure, which the President is expected to sign without delay, will start the Nation on a huge program of slum clearance, low-rent public housing and farm-home improvement.

Federal housing officials predict that construction of a "substantial number" of public housing units will be started in the next 12 months and that slum clearance will get under way in about a year.

Under the measure the Administration cannot construct more than 200,000 units in any one year.

The bill calls for 810,000 Federally financed, low-rent housing units in the next six years; a $1,500,000,000 five-year program of slum clearance, and a 325 million dollar program of farm home improvements.

It calls also for an integrated program of Federal research into better and cheaper housing meth-

No Powder Marks Found on Trousers, Backing Contention Of Marylanders

By John London
Post Reporter

Two new developments yesterday promised to shed light on how and where Earl Nelson, 50, was shot fatally Tuesday while crabbing in disputed waters on the Maryland-Virginia boundary.

1. FBI examination showed there were no powder marks on Nelson's trousers. This bolsters Maryland eyewitness accounts that Marylander Nelson was four to 10 feet away when shot in his boat by a rookie Virginia conservation officer, David Acree, 26.

Acree contends his gun accidentally discharged when Nelson resisted arrest for fishing illegally in Virginia waters. Maryland crabbers said the shooting was in Maryland.

The FBI report said the absence of "powder particles or residue" indicates one of two conclusions:

"First: The gun was held at a distance sufficiently great to preclude deposit of residue; Second: If held sufficiently close to deposit residues they were carried away by blood or dislodged prior to laboratory examination."

2. Maryland and Virginia authorities agreed to make a joint hydrographic survey this Tuesday to determine in which State's waters Nelson was shot. The survey may decide the jurisdictional dispute over which State should try Acree for the shooting.

Announcement of the agreement to survey the zigzag water boundary was made by Charles M. Lankford, Jr., Virginia fisheries commissioner, and confirmed by Hall Hammond, Maryland Attorney General.

Hammond yesterday was appointed by Maryland's Governor Lane to direct the Maryland investigation into the Chesapeake Bay incident. Observers regarded Hammond's assignment to the case as an unusual action, indicating the Governor's concern over the jurisdictional struggle.

First Fixed in 1668

Efforts to establish a definite boundary in the disputed area date back to 1668 when representatives of both colonies met at Watkins Point, on the Eastern Shore, and drew a line from the Point to the Atlantic Ocean.

A later basis for settling controversies was the "Arbitration Award of 1877," drawn up by a joint border commission. This states that the boundary follows the low waterline of the Potomac River on

Same Man To Prosecute Perjury Case On Retrial

Jurors' Disagreement Is Announced After More Than 14 Hours Of Deliberation

By Murrey Marder
Post Reporter

New York, July 8.—Deadlocked by a split of 8 votes for conviction and 4 for acquittal, the Alger Hiss perjury trial ended in a "hung jury" at 9:01 p. m. today.

For almost all of the more than 28½ hours that the case was in their hands since 4:20 p. m. yesterday, the jurors were hopelessly divided by the same 8-4 vote, they told reporters.

Before they were dismissed by Federal Judge Samuel H. Kaufman, the jury of 10 men and two women had reported three times previously they were unable to reach a decision in the six-week trial.

Attorney General Clark announced in Washington that "the Department of Justice will vigorously prosecute the Hiss case again as quickly as the docket of the court will permit."

Defense Takes It as Blow

The jury's action was a heavy blow to the 44-year-old Hiss, his wife, Priscilla, and their defense attorneys. They had made it clear during the trial that only a verdict of acquittal would be an acceptable judgment to them.

According to jurors among the majority, the principal reason for the minority's refusal to convict Hiss was its doubt as to the veracity of Whittaker Chambers.

The credibility of Chambers, former Communist spy-ring courier who declares that Hiss was a Communist in early 1938 and supplied him with secret State Department documents, was the crux of the Government's case.

Hiss, who maintained a stoic appearance throughout the trial, still managed a weak smile for reporters and photographers as he left the courtroom.

He told reporters, "I have nothing to say at this time." While the jury was deliberating, it was reported, he was drafting a statement he planned to issue if he was acquitted.

Prosecution Jubilant

Chief Defense Counsel Lloyd Paul Stryker, asked if he would again defend Hiss, declared:

"I'll defend this fellow forever, if he asks me."

The reaction of the prosecution staff was almost as jubilant as if they had won a conviction.

Prosecutor Thomas F. Murphy told reporters:

"The way the jury stood, eight to four, convinced me that righteousness was on the side of the Government."

"Don't forget," Murphy said, "it was two to one."

Murphy's superior, United States Attorney John F. X. McGohey, said:

"We'll put it back on the calendar. It'll come up depending on the situation among the judges. Mr. Murphy will try it again . . . He did a magnificent job."

It was indicated that the new trial might not be held before October.

Only yesterday the conspiracy trial of Judith Coplon and Valentin Gubitchev was postponed until October 15 on the grounds that no Federal judges were available to preside until that date.

Hiss will remain at liberty in $5000 bond.

Has 'Nothing to Say'

Hiss Crestfallen at Result Of Trial, Wife Near Tears

Occupied by Cows, Chambers Declines Statement on Case

Westminster, Md., July 8 (AP).—Whittaker Chambers, weary after a day of toil on his farm, tonight calmly received the news that the Alger Hiss perjury trial resulted in a hung jury.

In shirt sleeves and slacks and puffing a pipe, the chief prosecution witness told reporters, "In view of what has happened, no statement seems necessary."

The confessed former courier for a Communist spy syndicate, who has become a full-fledged farmer, maintained the air of detachment he had displayed all day while doing his chores.

During the day he and his family wasted no waiting around to hear word of the trial.

"Cows have to be milked," he explained.

His son and daughter, both in their early teens, helped Chambers and his wife as they tended to their duties in the fields and kitchen.

Occasionally he passed the group of newsmen on his way to and fron. the frame farmhouse. "Anything yet?" he would ask.

But he left the actual vigil up to the newsmen. After hearing the news and issuing his brief statement, he posed for a few photographs, then he prepared for bed.

His Voice Quavers, Hers Trembles as She Clenches, Opens Fists

New York, July 8 (U.P.).—Alger Hiss was shaken tonight by a Federal Court jury's failure to exonerate him of chages of lying under oath.

His wife, Priscilla, was near tears.

But each managed to flash one brief smile before they left the Federal courthouse to go home.

Hiss, who was gay, talkative and confident throughout the first hours of the jury's deliberations yesterday, had been silent and serious throughout most of today. He appeared crestfallen tonight.

Six times today the jury left its deliberation room and went into the court. And six times Hiss, 44, and his trim-looking wife, 45, hopefully went from the defense chambers to their seats in front of the judge hoping to hear a verdict of innocent.

By the time the jury had been sent home, Hiss had deep circles under his eyes. Mrs. Hiss' face was flushed, her voice trembled. Neither had had any dinner.

One of Hiss' attorneys rushed to his side after the dismissal of the jury and instructed him not to say anything to the press.

"I have nothing to say," he said in a quavering voice.

"No," Mrs. Hiss said, clenching and unclenching her fists.

House Freezes Out D. C. Heads In Raising High Officials' Pay

Some Cuts by House May Be Restored Despite Senate Action

Although the Senate Appropriations Committee has recommended an increase of $557,470,320 in the House appropriation for independent offices, thousands of jobs still hang in the balance.

Most of the committee's recommendations probably will be accepted by the Senate, but when the bill goes to conference with the House, part of the House-recommended cuts may be restored.

BUREAU OF THE BUDGET: The committee restored the full House cut of $331,450.

CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION: Although the Senate committee recommendation is $211,000 below total funds appropriated for the commission this year, it is $2,250,000 above the House figure, which would have forced laying off of 633 employes. The Senate committee also restored $500,000 of a request for $1,202,400, completely eliminated by the House, to enable the FBI to investigate applicants for sensitive positions in agencies which do not have their own investigating staffs; investigations will cost about $167 an applicant.

COUNCIL OF ECONOMIC ADVISERS: Restoration of this appropriation, from the $300,000 authorized by the House, to $340,000, the budget request, will enable the council to continue at its present level and to add 2 P-8 economists and 2 CAF 5 secretaries.

J. Edgar Hoover Voted an Extra $2500; Jess Larson $20,000

By Edward F. Ryan

The House yesterday passed by voice vote the bill to give substantial pay raises to top-ranking Government executives.

The action was taken after the body voted not to grant the $5000-a-year boosts proposed for the District Commissioners who now get $10,330 a year.

The bill now goes to the Senate where a similar measure has been awaiting action since early this year. It boosts Cabinet officers from $15,000 to $25,000, and gives other increases ranging from a few hundred dollars to $10,000 to about 230 other top Federal officials.

Representative Wayne L. Hays (D., Ohio) proposed to the House that it remove the Commissioners from the executive pay bill altogether.

A shout of indorsement greeted his plan, enforced by a standing vote of 132 to 48 erasing the Commissioners' increase from the bill.

Hays told the House the present Commissioners' salaries were ample compared with council members' salaries of $5000 in Detroit and Cincinnati, $4000 in Cleveland, $7500 in Philadelphia, and $8000 in Pittsburgh.

In passing the pay bill, the House acted upon a direct recent request from President Truman to increase the pay of top Federal executives.

Foreman Favored Acquittal Early in Trial, FBI Heard

By a Post Reporter

New York, July 8.—Early in the Alger Hiss trial, it was disclosed today, the FBI received a report that the jury foreman expressed sympathy for Hiss and said he would use his influence with the jury in Hiss' behalf.

James Samuel H. Kaufman on June 2 and June 6 in the judge's chambers.

This was revealed in the court transcript of talks between opposing attorneys and Presiding Judge

No clear evidence of the accusation was received, however, and it was decided to drop the issue—but not before the possibilities of declaring a mistrial, removing the juror, or ordering contempt of court action was discussed.

Prosecutor Murphy made it clear at that time that he agreed there was "no direct evidence" of wrongdoing. Both he and Hiss' chief attorney, Lloyd Paul Stryker, agreed that it did not warrant any drastic action by the court.

But in the summation of the Government's case yesterday, Murphy took occasion to note that the opinion of all jurors is equal.

"The foreman for instance," he said, "is here by virtue of chance. He is the juror known as No. 1. He has no authority other than to announce the verdict. . ."

Foreman of the jury was Hubert E. James, an executive of the General Motors Acceptance Corp. He voted for acquittal.

After the trial James denied that he had said he would try to influence the jury in Hiss' behalf.

Peace Formula Believed Found

Hope High for Settlement Of Construction Strike Today

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

Optimism was high early today that the 39-day-old construction industry strike would be settled this afternoon.

After a series of conferences running past midnight, spokesmen for Washington area builders, sub-contractors, striking carpenters and laborers expressed belie. a peace formula has been found.

Details of the agreement were withheld pending a meeting of leaders of the Master Builders Association and the Construction Contractors Council, and the rank and file of the two unions.

Some 3500 AFL carpenters struck June 1 demanding a 10-cent-an-hour increase on their $2.40-an-hour pay.

The following day approximately the same number of AFL building laborers walked out for 15 cents an hour. The laborers were getting $1.35 an hour.

As a result of the dual strike, 100 million dollars worth of commercial construction in the District and nearby Virginia and Maryland came to a virtual standstill.

An estimated 10,000 nonstriking AFL mechanics and laborers were furloughed without pay pending settlement of the work stoppage.

Federal Mediator James A. Holden, who helped avert the Capital Transit strike last week, and Regional Mediation Service Director Martin J. O'Connell kept a series of peace negotiations going from 3 to 9:30 p. m. yesterday. Management and union leaders then continued the discussions through the night.

The two conciliators reported the outlook was "hopeful" for a resumption of construction activities here on Monday.

Cotton Acres Set Record Despite Plea

By the United Press

The Agriculture Department reported yesterday that cotton farmers this year planted their largest acreage since 1937, despite a Government plea for a voluntary 7 per cent reduction.

Officials said the report indicated the Nation is headed into another era of troublesome surpluses which may require rigid controls to keep production within reasonable bounds next year.

The report showed that 26,380,000 acres of cotton were under cultivation on July 1, or 14.2 per cent more than last year. It added that the crop was making "good" to "very good" progress in large producing areas such as Texas, increasing the threat of large surpluses.

The department included no production estimates in yesterday's planting report. The first such estimate will be made August 1.

If yields equal only the average of the past five years, officials said, it would mean another crop equal to last year's 14,868,000 bales.

While final figures still are not available, it is estimated the 1948 yield was about 2,500,000 bales larger than domestic and foreign needs. Thus the Nation will have a carry-over of about 5,700,000 bales when the new crop comes in.

Officials said the large acreage was particularly bad news at this time because of a serious slump in domestic cotton consumption. Consumption now is running at only 7,750,000 bales a year compared with a previous estimate of nine million bales.

economic expansion act of 1949."

The group headed by Senator Murray (D., Mont.) hopes to offer the bill on Tuesday, 24 hours after the presidential message is received.

This does not mean the bill has "Administration backing." It has had no White House clearance, although it has been widely circulated on Capitol Hill and among some Administration officials downtown.

But its supporters are said to feel the revised measure will provide some specific proposals to carry out the more general recommendations in Mr. Truman's economic message.

The bill, as it was announced earlier, would provide Federal loans to expand or develop a dozen or more basic industries. It also would authorize the building of plants for lease to private firms; the channeling of defense contracts and Federal works into "distressed" areas; loans to help payless families move out of such areas, and several other Federal moves to combat unemployment.

The forthcoming draft of the bill, it was reported, will be "sharpened up" to contain these features:

An emergency relief fund of perhaps $3,500,000,000 for use by the President on a matching basis with State funds.

Creation of a new White House officer to administer and coordinate anti-joblessness efforts. One of his functions, for instance, would be to certify "distressed areas," thereby qualifying them for special help.

Setting up a commission to study State, Federal and local tax structures, from the standpoint of devising a "flexible" tax policy to keep the economy on an even keel of prosperity.

The White House message, due to reach Congress about noon on Monday, will arrive in two parts—first, Mr. Truman's own 6000-word report on the economic health of the country and his policy recommendations; and, second, the more detailed review prepared by his three-member Council of Economic Advisers. Mr. Trupman's own message is based on the council's findings.

Carpenters' Strike To Delay Freeway

A 10-week delay in finishing Whitehurst Freeway because of the current carpenters' strike, was predicted yesterday by John N. Robertson, District Highway director.

It will take that long after the strike is settled to complete forms and pour concrete for the structure over K st. nw., he said.

Extending from Rock Creek Parkway to Key Bridge, the Freeway was originally scheduled for completion July 1. It is a $3,294,000 project.

Only 15 persons are at work on the project at present. These are setting stone, installing railings and other work that can be done in absence of the carpenters.

The strike has also slowed up progress on the 14th st. bridge over the Potomac River, and the Dupont Circle underpass.

By the United Press

The House Agriculture Committee yesterday urged Congress to authorize a "trial run" on Secretary of Agriculture Charles F. Brannan's new farm plan to forestall a similar but "fancy free" program next year.

It said the Hope-Aiken farm law—which will go into effect next January 1 unless sidetracked by Congress—would permit Brannan to make an even broader test of his plan to maintain farm income at a high level and still let retail food prices fall.

"That act does not provide, as does the committee bill, that payments may be used on only three commodities at one time nor that those three must be perishable, non-storable commodities," the committee said. "The Secretary is left fancy free and all he needs is the money."

Compromise Studied in Senate

Brannan's plan would authorize farmers to sell perishables such as meat, milk and eggs for whatever they would bring. The Government then would pay the farmer the difference between the support price and the price he actually received.

It also provides for the Government to continue its present system of supporting storage crops such as corn, wheat and cotton through crop loans and purchase agreements.

The House committee's "trial run" plan is only one of several approaches to the current congressional dilemma over what to do about a new farm program.

The Senate Agriculture Committee has been discussing its own possible compromise. It would let the Government support the prices of perishables but retain the flexible price-support feature of the Hope-Aiken law.

Brannan Plan May Be Issue

Senator Clinton P. Anderson (D., N. M.) who preceded Brannan as Secretary of Agriculture, said that would permit the department to support farm prices by loans, purchases, disposal programs or direct subsidy payments to farmers.

Supporters of the Hope-Aiken law, which would let the support level range from 60 to 90 per cent of parity, argue that this is the only really effective was to control farm production.

There is some sentiment among Democratic leaders for making the Brannan plan the chief farm issue in the 1950 congressional elections.

The House bill also would provide for a higher support price for most farm crops with wheat being the notable exception. It would gear the parity formula, which determines the price support level, to a recent 10-year average instead of the present 1909-14 base.

The original committee vote on the measure was split squarely along party lines with Republicans threatening to carry their opposition to the House floor when the bill comes up for a vote there. It is now awaiting clearance by the House Rules Committee.

Claims for Jobless Pay Show Slight Decrease

The total number of claims for unemployment insurance declined slightly last week but there was an increase of 18,796 in so-called initial claims, indicating new unemployment.

There were 338,212 initial claims filed during the week, compared with 319,416 in the previous week. Robert C. Goodwin, director of the Bureau of Employment Security, reported yesterday. Continued claims, representing persons who have been unemployed at least one full week, fell off from 2,104,538 to 2,053,942. One year before, continued claims numbered 1,000,411.

Union Rejects Inland Steel Pension Plan

Pittsburgh, July 8 (AP).—The Inland Steel Co. of Chicago offered its 19,000 workers a pension and insurance plan tonight, but the CIO United Steelworkers said they would turn it down.

The Inland Steel offer was the only departure from the U. S. Steel Corp.'s flat "no" on both wage raises and pensions. Other companies joining to reject the steelworkers' demands were Wheeling Steel Corp., Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co., Crucible Steel Co. of America and Bethlehem Steel Co.

The union announcement that it would reject Inland's offer, which did not include a pay raise, still made a strike of about 500,000 employes of 189 steel producing companies likely July 16 unless the Government acts to avert it. July 16 is the deadline for agreement on "rates of pay" and insurance provisions which were reopened under the current contract. The pact permits a strike.

Conference Monday

Joseph Jeneske, international representative of the Steelworkers, said Inland's proposal would be rejected at a conference Monday morning. He said the union would proceed with plans to strike July 16 if the company's position is not changed.

Jeneske declared the company's proposal amounted to less than one cent an hour, although a company spokesman estimated it would cost Inland 12 million dollars or 40 cents per employe-hour worked.

Inland offered a $5500 group life insurance plan plus other insurance benefits, said it would match primary social security benefits for workers with 20 or more years' service up to $50 a month, and pay about two-thirds of the cost of retirement income for workers retiring at 65 with 35 years' service.

Jeneske described Inland's proposal as inadequate because it calls for compulsory retirement at age 65 and for contributions by employes. He said the union seeks a pension of $150 with no employe contribution. He said Inland's offer was about 25 per cent of the union's pension demand.

Britain to Barter Machinery For Big Russian Wheat Supply

From Press Dispatches

London, July 8. — Britain has agreed to trade Russia machinery for nearly a million tons of Russian coarse grains and a big quantity of wheat, official British sources said today.

Disclosure of the barter deal with Moscow came as John W. Snyder, United States Secretary of the Treasury, began talks with government leaders here on Britain's dollar crisis and world trade.

While the conferees analyzed the British economic situation in detail, Britain moved on two other fronts to conserve her dwindling resources.

1. The Colonial Office announced imposition of a temporary ban on purchases by Britain's 36 non-self-governing colonies from the United States and Canada.

Seeks Relief From Promise

2. Britain also reportedly sought to be released from her 1946 loan agreement not to set up import quotas which would discriminate against United States exports.

At the time of the Senate-ratified $3,750,000,000 United States loan to Britain the British agreed not to discriminate against American exports. They now want to abandon the pledge to help meet the current dollar crisis.

Britain bought 750,000 tons of coarse grains—rye, barley, oats and corn—from Russia last year, and officials emphasized the new deal represents no change in policy. What is new is that it also involves wheat—which Britain buys for dollars from the United States and Canada.

In Washington, the United States State Department said such a deal would be consistent with the 1947 Anglo-Russian agreement and "the one-year contract seems to be a perfectly normal supply proposition."

British officials declined to say how much wheat was involved, except that it was a "big amount." They said it was a "matter of course" that the goods Britain will furnish Russia in return will not include items of potential military value.

Snyder, who arrived from Paris this morning, spent almost four hours this afternoon hearing Sir Stafford Cripps and other government leaders explain Britain's loss of dollar reserves despite substantial Marshall Plan aid. Snyder is expected to take up officially with Sir Stafford the 1946 pledge request during their present conferences.

Cripps has previously asserted Britain will be compelled to curb imports from the United States to conserve her dwindling supply of dollars.

A Colonial Office spokesman declined "even to guess" the volume of dollar business that would be affected by the order to the colonies barring dollar purchases, but said general compliance was expected.

The list includes colonies near the United States Eastern Coast such as Bermuda, the Bahamas, and islands of the Caribbean which do considerable business with America.

Finance ministers of the self-governing dominions, which control their own finances but share in the reserve fund, are to meet here with Cripps next week to discuss their positions. Astralia already has ordered dollar-buying restrictions.

Negotiations for a longer term British-Soviet trade agreement are expected to follow the barter deal.

Britain and Argentina signed a five-year trade agreement in Buenos Aires June 27. Despite United States objections that two-Nation agreements violate the spirit of free competitive international trade.

Britain hopes to conclude a big-scale barter agreement with Russia which is expected to exceed 400 million dollars in value both ways over the next 12-month period.

Food, Tobacco Union Votes NLRB Compliance

Philadelphia, July 8 (U.P.)—The Food and Tobacco Workers Union (CIO), whose officers steadfastly have refused to sign non-Communist affidavits, today voted to comply with the "legal requirements for utilization of the National Labor Relations Board."

The union's international executive board said the action was taken because of a "sellout" by Congress and President Truman on repeal of the Taft-Hartley law, and the "renewed offensive of the bosses." The board also cited the "dictatorial and raiding policies of certain national leaders of CIO."

Britain Gives Dock Strikers An Ultimatum

London, July 8 (AP).—The British government warned 10,000 idle stevedores tonight to get back to work by Monday morning or it will ask King George VI to declare their stoppage a state of national emergency.

Such a proclamation would give the government the power to enact any emergency regulation, short of actual labor conscription, to resume work.

Home Secretary Chuter Ede told the House of Commons his intention to ask royal intervention. He said the stoppage was an outlaw action stemming from a dispute between two Canadian Seamen's unions.

"The only reason we have to deal with it," he said, "is that Communists see in it a chance of fermenting unrest, injuring our trade and hampering our recovery."

The dock stoppage affects 105 ships. Union chieftains called for a vote today on whether to return to work, but only a few men voted. The count was 338 for going back and 159 for remaining idle.

Police Seize Reds' Files

Sydney, Australia, July 8 (AP).—Two truckloads of the Australian Communist Party's documents and files were seized by police today in a raid reported aimed at tracing labor union funds which might be used to aid striking coal miners.

Marx House, the party's headquarters, was searched by 50 officers. No large sum of money was found.

A government source in Canberra said the police sought £54,000 ($173,880) withdrawn from banks recently by unions. The government ordered freezing of all union funds last week to prevent the unions from aiding Australia's 24,000 striking coal miners.

The unions were directed by a court to turn the money over to the court. None so far has done so. Two union officials have been jailed as a result.

'New Look' Blamed For Surplus of Wool

Canberra, Australia, July 7 (U.P.).—Prime Minister Joseph B. Chifley said today Australia is saddled with a surplus of wool because American women are rebelling against the "new look."

Chifley said Australia had fallen 40 per cent short of its goal of exporting 600,000 bales of wool to the United States.

Economist Speaks

Dr. Myrdal Asks Revival Of Investment

Dr. Gunnar Myrdal, executive secretary of the United Nations Economic Commission for Europe and a noted Swedish economist, said yesterday that Europe's economy is disintegrating.

He urged a revival of private capital investments by American finance to "oil the machinery" of European trade. Without private financing, the "strangulation" of trade will continue, he said.

The London economic crisis is not just a temporary one, he declared, and is due to many complex factors.

"The greatest existing bottleneck, one more dangerous than the shortages of coal, steel or other basic materials, is lack of confidence in the future," Dr. Myrdal told an audience of about 150 which included Paul G. Hoffman, ECA administrator.

He was addressing a luncheon in his honor given by the Washington World Affairs Center at the Willard Hotel.

The lack of confidence is due largely to the cold war, Dr. Myrdal said. Although trade between East and West should not be regarded as a panacea for Europe's troubles, he added, such trade would be one required condition to "get Western Europe off the American dole."

No single step can be regarded as the solution to Europe's economic problems, he continues, as "the channels for a multilateral system of trade have been broken and a new pattern is needed."

Two of the reasons for the economic disintegration of Europe Dr. Myrdal said, are the increasing economic nationalism used by governments and the dollar shortage.

One of the most important factors lacking in the situation is a capital market between the various countries, Dr. Myrdal said. He said cooperation between American finance and banking and "solid, conservative and experienced" European banking houses should be encouraged.

Hoffman, who said he agreed with Dr. Myrdal on the complexity of the European problems, said United States imports must be built up from the present one billion dollars a year to 5 billions in imports, balanced by about the same amount in exports. Otherwise, he said, we must face a world of shrinking trade.

Senator Pepper (D., Fla.), who was in the audience, said the cold war was the worst of all follies, adding that surely, there must be an honorable meeting ground for living and working together."

Canada Told Its Trade Is Dropping Fast

Montreal, July 8 (AP).—The Canadian Chamber of Commerce said today that sale of Canadian manufactured goods in the sterling area is "dropping at an alarming rate," and it called for "continued effort by the government to clear the way for private trading in foreign markets."

The chamber urged "continued support for governmental and business endeavors to restore multilateral trade among nations." It said a chief obstacle to private trading is the prevalence of bilateral deals resulting from the inconvertibility of currencies.

"The commiittee believes that no effort should be spared by the government in eradicating the 'invisible traiffs' in the form of restrictive and arbitrary practices in customs administration which constitute a barrier to trade, particularly with the United States."

Air Force Sets Up New Tactical Unit

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Air Force officials yesterday disclosed the existence of a new Tactical Air Force, with mobile headquarters at Pope Air Base, N. C., and said its creation should result in better air-ground combat readiness.

The new unit is expected to help correct what Army officials have described as an "unsatisfactory" situation in American tactical air power. Air Force chiefs have given them assurances this neglect will be remedied.

Maj. Gen. Robert M. Lee, USAF tactical air commander, told The Washington Post the new Tactical Air Force will make possible regular "day-to-day" training in close air support of ground troops, so necessary to efficient military operations.

Lee also predicted that an improved Republic Thunderjet—the F-84D—and other models in development will provide the Army with the close air support weapon they need.

Tactical Warplane Needed

Lack of a satisfactory tactical warplane and insufficient joint training were two of the main points cited by Gen. Jacob L. Devers, Army field forces commander, in recent protests to the Air Force. As a result, Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg, USAF chief of staff, promised greater emphasis would be put on tactical air power.

"The F-84, beefed up for dive-bombing, rockets and strafing will do an acceptable job, though lacking somewhat in range," said Lee. "We hope to make further improvements."

Many Army officials and some top Air Force officers who have specialized in tactical aviation were privately critical of the USAF action last fall in taking away Tactical Air Command's "troops." Its combat groups and supporting air and ground forces were transferred to a new higher echelon—Continental Air Command. TAC was made a subordinate unit to CAC—and became largely a planned staff concerned with mapping training programs and standards.

Groups Double in Brass

Continental Air Command arranged joint training exercises with the Army based on TAC's recommendations, but its air groups also double in brass as part of the Air Defense Command, training reserves, and similar tasks.

Originally, it was planned to establish two tactical air divisions under TAC—one on the East Coast and one in the West—to handle joint training. This was abandoned. Instead, the new Tactical Air Force is now being organized. It will consist of a permanent headquarters staff of about 50 officers and men, permanently attached radar, radio and other units, forming a control network, and combat forces assigned for rotated training.

Col. Chester L. Sluder heads the TAF, pending assignment of a general officer. Based at Fort Bragg's Pope Air Base, it will work closely with the Fifth Army Corps there and move about handling joint close air support and airborne training involving the 3d Infantry Division, Fort Benning, Ga.; 11th Airborne Division, Camp Campbell, Ky.; 82d Airborne, Fort Bragg; 2d Armored, Camp Hood, Tex., and 2d Infantry, Fort Lewis, Wash.

General Lee, who will have the Tactical Air Force under his command, believes that with its establishment, the new Continental Air Command system establishment will operate satisfactorily as far as Army support is concerned. The new system has these advantages, he said:

1. Reduction of the entire Air Force to 48 groups would have left the old TAC with very few close-support units. Continental has many more available for assignment.

2. TAC has been relieved of logistics and administrative duties, giving the staff more time for "deep thinking" on long-range planning.

On the other side of the ledger, Lee says, is the fact there is "divided control" of tactical aviation. Much more work is required to draw up detailed training plans and justifications for CAC to approve and the air forces to carry out. All in all, he concludes, the new system is working well and with the establishment of the new Tactical Air Force, it should fill the bill.

Improvement Seen Already

Already there has been improvement, says Lee. In June, troop carrier units and airborne divisions carried out seven battalion jumps—the greatest number in at least a year. General Devers had high praise for the air support in recent Operation Tarheel.

Critics of current Air Force tactical aviation often cite the air squadrons of the Marine Corps as an example of what close air support should be. They say the Marines are superior for several reasons: (1) Leatherneck pilots engage in regular training with Infantry—not just maneuvers; (2) 87 per cent of the Marine fliers are qualified foot soldiers, having had actual service with troops or attended ground combat schools, while few if any Air Force fighter pilots so understand the problems on the ground, the evaluation of terrain, etc.; (3) the Marines maintain 16 forward air controllers (pilots) with each division on the ground to coordinate the air strikes by radio, while current Air Force doctrine calls for but eight with each army (this number probably will be doubled); (4) as the result of the above, the USAF critics say, Marine aviation can dive-bomb safely within 100 yards of its own front lines, while Air Force planes seldom go after targets inside 400 or 500 yards.

Air Force officers will not admit this superiority, though some of them will concede that the Marine squadrons now are in a "greater state of readiness" for close support in war.

The USAF pilots, moreover, say their missions are broader than the Leathernecks. They must plan to fight on much wider fronts and do a wider variety of tasks than the Marine amphibious specialists. The latter use comparatively slow, conventional type planes for much of the ground support work, protecting them with jet fighters.

Air Force men are wedded to a jet fighter for close support. On the wide front they may expect there might not be air cover always handy for slower conventional planes and the latter wouldn't have a 50-50 chance against enemy jet fighters.

Most of all, the Air Force is opposed to the Marine practice of a wing of aviation under control of each division, a practice which permits continuous training. They consider this wasteful, and insist on keeping tactical air under one head, available for assignment, in toto if necessary, to a division, corps or army as needed at any particular moment. This is a question now the subject of debate at high level.

Top Army officials are willing to go along with the Air Force on this as a general rule—but believe that in certain situations tactical air should come temporarily under the control of ground commanders.

On this point, and others cited by General Devers in his recent demands for proper emphasis on tactical air power, there can be no definitive, categorical answer, most experts agree. The question of the proper number of troop carrier groups, the right percentage of fighter aircraft available for ground-air training and the problem of type of plane for such operations are matters for continuing, expert discussion and evaluation.

Joint Chiefs State Views On Chairman

The uniformed heads of the Army, Navy and Air Force said yesterday that the man chosen for the proposed chairmanship of the Joint Chiefs of Staff should outrank everyone else in the armed forces.

But the three officials — who form the Joint Chiefs—told the House Armed Services Committee that they—not the chairman—should be the legally constituted "principal military adviser" to the President.

Jointly taking the witness stand yesterday, Gen. Omar Bradley, Army Chief of Staff; Adm. Louis Denfeld, chief of naval operations, and Gen. Hoyt Vandenberg, Air Force chief of staff, urged the Congressmen not to whittle down the power and prestige of the new post.

Despite their plea, however, the committee decided that the chairman should preside over but not have the status of an actual member of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. The vote was 15 to 9.

Under the Administration-backed unification bill, already passed by the Senate, the Joint Chiefs chairman would be the top-ranking officer of the armed services. He would be a member—without vote—of the Joint Chiefs and be principal military adviser to the President, the Defense Secretary and the National Security Council.

Chairman Vinson (D., Ga.) and others on the committee have opposed such a course. They cite a warning from former President Herbert Hoover, head of the Government reorganization commission, that under the Senate-approved bill to tighten unification, the Joint Chiefs' chairman would be really a "chief of staff" over all the services.

Vinson has said that a powerful "chief of staff" could become a military dictator. President Truman has pooh-poohed such fears. Yesterday, General Bradley echoed the President's statement.

"I cannot see how one could conceive of a military man in the United States becoming a dictator," General Bradley said. "I do not believe that any group in the United States has the good of our country and the firmness of its Government more at heart than the soldiers and sailors and airmen who come from every walk of life and every background.

"I would suggest that if we ever have a dictator it would be because of weakness in our military organization and not because of military strength."

Earlier in the day, Frank Hecht, president of the Navy League of the United States, attacked the Tydings bill as a step toward "statism." Asking that it be shelved, he told the committee that the joint chiefs' chairman plan opens the way for the "complete dominance of our military organization by one man."

The committee left undecided the relative rank of the chairman. Members spent most of the session debating this once tentatively approved point, after Bradley raised the question.

Vinson had proposed that the official have "precedence" over the Joint Chiefs only while actually presiding over them. At other times he would rank according to his permanent status. Bradley said this would mean that if one of the present Joint Chiefs were chosen for the post, he would be demoted. Denfeld and Vandenberg backed his stand. They declared that as the official would have no right to command, the question of precedence was largely honorary.

The committee is expected to settle the point this morning, and vote out a bill next week.

Truman Tells Congress How To Save Billion

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

President Truman, accused by most Republicans and some Democrats of being a "spender," relayed word to Congress yesterday on how it could save nearly a billion dollars on the military budget.

Senator Tydings (D., Md.), chairman of the Armed Services Committee, told reporters about it after he emerged from Mr. Truman's office.

He recalled that the Chief Executive, in his budget message last January, asked for 800 million dollars to finance a universal military training plan.

Congress has made no move to enact a universal military training bill, and is not expected to make any this year.

Funds Diverted

In April, the House in effect diverted nearly all of the 800 million dollars to the Air Force so as to increase the number of air groups from 48 to 58.

Senator Tydings said that Mr. Truman, while still strong for universal training, did not think Congress should take money earmarked for that plan and use it for something not asked for in the Administration's budget message.

Tydings said Mr. Truman saw another saving of 128 million dollars as a result of the action of the House in approving 272 million dollars for pay raises for the armed services. The President had recommended 400 million dollars for the pay raises.

By Tydings' calculation, this would be an over-all saving of 928 million dollars.

He said Mr. Truman was a "little more economy-minded" than some members of Congress, and he said he would back him to the limit in the Senate.

Cuts Are Indicated

The Senate Appropriations Committee is now considering the 16 billion dollars military appropriations bill approved by the House. There are strong indications that it will make substantial cuts, some of them in line with Mr. Truman's ideas.

Senator Wherry (R., Nebr.) minority leader, heard about Senator Tydings' statement at the White House and said that what the President had recommended was "not a cut at all."

Senators Taft (R., Ohio) and Bridges (R., N. H.) scoffed at Tydings' claim about Mr. Truman being economy-minded. Bridges said he "still has a long way to go to catch up with some of us on economy."

Greek Regime Got No Bases, Yugoslavs Say

Belgrade, July 8 (AP).—Yugoslavia today indignantly denied charges she had let the Greek government use Yugoslav bases against Greek guerilla forces.

The government-controlled Belgrade radio quoted the guerilla broadcasting station as saying an agreement for use of Yugoslav soil by Greek National forces had been reached at a secret conference among "monarcho-fascists, English, American and Yugoslav officers." (The Greek rebels habitually refer to the Greek Nationals as "monarcho-fascists.")

The Yugoslav denial and retort of "tremendous slander" marked the first time this country has taken the Greek rebel forces to task. On previous occasions the Yugoslav press and radio has blasted the Athens government.

Greeks Report Capture Of Rebel Stronghold

Athens, July 8 (AP).—The Greek government today announced capture of a mountain stronghold at the Yugoslav frontier which Communist-led guerillas had held for three years.

The peak is Mount Kaimakchalan, which rises to 7500 feet northwest of Salonika. The Greek-Yugoslav border runs along the slope.

A communique said 124 guerillas were killed and 107 captured. The army, it said, advanced "all along the frontier."

Nisei Wins Appointment To Annapolis

Seattle, July 8 (AP).—An 18-year-old Nisei who spent the war in the Minidoka relocation center at Hunt, Idaho, was on a train today bound for Annapolis, Md.

Friends said they believed Takeshi Yoshihara is the first Nisei ever to be appointed to the United States Naval Academy.

But they weren't as surprised as "Tak."

He thought he was going to the Military Academy at West Point, N. Y.

"You could have knocked me over with a feather when they told me I was going to Annapolis," he said. "I thought if anything it would have been West Point, because that is what the people who gave us the exam said."

"Tak" was appointed by Representative Thor C. Tollefson (R., Wash.). Yoshihara was senior speaker at the Renton (Wash.) high school graduation. He got straight As in science and mathematics.

His brother, Bob, was in the Army during the war. His father is a gardener.

"I'm planning to make the regular Navy my career when I graduate," Tak said. "I can't let down these fine people who appointed me."

Jap Premier Demands Rule Over Police

Tokyo, Saturday, July 9 (AP).—An autopsy established today that Sadanori Shimoyama, high government railway official, was beaten to death before his mangled body was found on railroad tracks Tuesday.

As president of the State Railroad Corp., Shimoyama had just issued an order dismissing 30,000 workers as part of an economy move.

Tokyo, (Saturday), July 9 (U.P.).—Premier Shigeru Yoshida's cabinet called today for an immediate revision of the police system to put it under his authority "in view of the current political and economic situation."

The action followed Yoshida's failure yesterday to replace the chief of Japan's police system with one of his own choosing.

"It is impossible for the government to assume responsibility for the maintenance of peace and order in Japan unless the administration gets stronger control of the police system" the cabinet said in a formal announcement.

Under the system inspired by Gen. Douglas MacArthur, control is vested in a separate and independent agency, the department of public safety. The demand apparently was inspired in part by Railway Chief Sadenori Shimoyama's suicide or murder.

U. N. Told U. S. Seeks No Gain In Pacific Isles

Lake Success, N. Y., July 8 (U.P.).—The United States told the United Nations today it was pursuing its administration of strategic Pacific islands wrested from the Japanese without thought of "financial gain or advantage or colonial exploitation."

United States Ambassador Francis B. Sayre opened the Trusteeship Council's discussion of the annual report of the strategic area, which includes the Marshall, Carolina and Marianas Islands.

Earlier Sayre said the islands were open to inspection and the United States expected a U. N. mission to visit the territory next winter.

Sayre said the only "closed" area is Eniwetok atoll, scene of atomic experiments.

Vice Consul's Beating Stirs U. S. Protest

The United States ordered a vigorous protest yesterday to "appropriate high Communist authorities" over the arrest of Vice Consul William M. Olive at Shanghai.

The vice consul, arrested on a charge of violating traffic rules, has ben held incommunicado by police at Shanghai for the last two days. Official reports from Shanghai said he was beaten while being questioned.

The protest appeared to be a step toward setting up a working relationship with the Communists, without regard to the question of formal diplomatic recognition, but the State Department denied it had any political significance.

Ambassador J. Leighton Stuart at Nanking and Consul General O. Edmund Clubb at Peiping were instructed to make immediate protests over the heads of the Shanghai Communists. They were told to protest not only the arrest and treatment of Olive, but also the "arbitrary" treatment given other American consular officers who went to the Shanghai police station to inquire about Olive and take him food.

It was left up to Stuart and Clubb what "appropriate" authorities to deal with. The Communist forces led by Mao Tse-tung have yet to set up a central regime.

Gen. Darcy to Command German Tactical Units

Wiesbaden, Germany, July 8 (AP).—The United States Air Force announced today its tactical units in Germany are being placed under a new command.

The new Second Air Division will be commanded by Brig. Gen. Thomas C. Darcy of Washington, D. C. Its headquarters will be at Landsberg.

Tactical units in Germany previously were under the direct command of United States Air Force headquarters for Europe in Weisbaden.

Taft May Oppose Atlantic Pact

not going to stay here forever to do it."

Taft's colloquy on the extent of our arms commitments under the treaty came between an attack on the pact by Senator Arthur V. Watkins (R., Utah) and a vigorous defense of it by Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, jr., (R., Mass.).

Secretary of State Acheson has said that although signatories of the pact bind themselves to a program of "mutual assistance" in rebuilding their defensive strength it is up to each country to decide what is necessary.

Watkins in his speech accused the State Department of hiding the extent of our commitments behind "diplomatic doubletalk."

He charged the treaty is a "blank check commitment" for military aid to Europe and that European nations knew this when they signed the treaty last April 4. He urged the Senate to write reservations into the pact ruling out any commitment to supply arms or go to war.

Lodge in his speech said rejection of the pact "would be a step fraught with the most colossal danger." But he said the pact is "no panacea for security and does not relieve us of the need for military preparedness."

Like Connally and Vandenberg, Lodge argued a Senator could vote for the pact and "vote any way he wishes on rearming Europe."

"For my part, I will vote for the arms program," Lodge said. "Whether or not we are committed to it, it certainly is a good idea."

Taft questioned Watkins on whether a Senator could vote for the pact without being morally obligated to vote for arms, too.

"I don't think I could without stultified myself," replied Watkins.

Taft quoted from a State Department report on the arms program, and said:

"I take it that the State Department is saying that this treaty is not a deterrent to war unless arms are added to arm the nations of Europe. The words I read really seem to make the treaty an adjunct to the arms program, which they say should be undertaken regardless of the treaty, instead of making the arms program an adjunct of the treaty."

Taft said he will speak on the pact when the Senate meets Monday. The Senate meanwhile picked up another vote for the treaty when John Foster Dulles (R., N. Y.) took his Senate oath. Dulles said he was still undecided about the arms program but did not regard a vote for the pact as a commitment for the arms program.

Ten Senators, led by Senator Ralph E. Flanders (R., Vt.), meanwhile framed a resolution calling for a world peace alliance unhampered by vetoes, for an international police force and outlawing of the atom bomb.

The resoution said an effort should first be made to revise the United Nations Charter to carry out their proposals. But if a veto in the United Nations prevented such action, the new world organization would go forward as part of the North Atlantic operation.

Besides Flanders, only one of the group who indicated he may vote against the pact unless the world alliance idea is accepted, other signers were:

High American Officials Quit German Military Government

Berlin, July 8 (AP).—A drastic changeover in American Military Government in Germany took shape today with the resignation of Lawrence Wilkinson, economics chief.

Wilkinson was the first of the veteran top executives here to arrange to leave the staff of the new military governor, John J. McCloy, effective August 1.

Wilkinson's deputy, Philip Hawkins of Marion, Mass., will leave at the same time. The property control division which Hawkins headed is being dissolved.

American circles predicted that most of the highest officials who served with Gen. Lucius D. Clay, would resign soon.

Clay's special advisor on political affairs, J. Anthony Panuch of New York, is known to have submitted his resignation.

Other German developments today:

A new payments plan for British-German trade has been submitted to the United States Government in Washington for approval.

The plan envisages increasing German exports to Britain to the equivalent of more than 200 million dollars.

An American official here said this did not mean Britain contributions to western Germany would cease, but that the method of calculating them would be changed.

The four military commandants of Berlin agreed to meet next Tuesday in an effort to restore the city to normal.

Haiti Granted Loan For Valley Project

Port Au Prince, Haiti, July 8 (U.P.).—A loan of 4 million dollars has been granted to the Haitian government by the United States Export-Import Bank, it was announced today.

The money will be used to start the development of the Artibonite Valley, a project patterned after the Tennessee Valley Authority.

Chesapeake Problem

Behind the present and past incidents of violence in the conflict over fishing rights in the lower Chesapeake lies the very difficult question of private equities and vested interests against the general good which is so often presented in an industrial society. One basic fact is that the Chesapeake fishing resources, once seemingly inexhaustible, are now in a dangerous state of depletion. The other basic fact is that these fisheries afford the principal means of livelihood to a very large number of residents of the islands and lower shores of the bay. The rigorous limitations that must be placed upon various forms of commercial fishing, if this great natural treasure is not to be destroyed as so many others have been, are necessarily unpopular with those whose economic interests are affected.

Of the two States, Maryland has made the more consistent efforts to devise and enforce an adequate conservation program. Attempts to reach a workable understanding with the Virginia authorities on the problem have been unsuccessful for various reasons, among them the complaint of the Virginia fishermen that all such arrangements favored the interest of Maryland citizens. Virginia, of course, also has conservation laws, but they are much less stringent than those of Maryland, especially in relation to oyster dredging and the inspection of culls, and less vigorously enforced.

Until about two years ago an ancient system of extraterritoriality prevailed in the bay, under which citizens of one State arrested by the officers of the other would be turned over to their local authorities for prosecution. Complaints that penalties exacted by Virginia courts from Virginians convicted of violations of Maryland law were much less severe than those imposed upon Marylanders by Maryland courts for violations of Virginia law led to an abrogation of the agreement by the Maryland Legislature. Early this year, after the determination of Maryland to protect its own waters became clear, a court at Leonardtown sentenced two captured Virginia dredge-boat oystermen to jail terms, instead of imposing the customary fines.

The only practicable solution appears to be the one proposed in a recent report by the Chesapeake-Potomac Commission, whose members were appointed by Governors Lane and Tuck to make an impartial study of the question. The proposal is the creation of a Chesapeake Authority to have jurisdiction over the bay and all its tributaries and empowered to impose and enforce whatever regulations may be necessary for the preservation and restoration of edible marine life. But such an authority if it is to command confidence must be wholly removed from political influence and must proceed on the principle that its paramount responsibility is the general good.

Defense Powers

Common sense in the House Armed Services Committee has overridden Chairman Vinson's proposal that the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff be a civilian. The House committee has hamstrung the position almost as much, however, by providing that the chairman of the Joint Chiefs shall merely preside and shall not be a member of the body, and that he shall be regarded as the senior officer of the armed services only when actually presiding. These qualifications go a long way toward vitiating the provisions of the Tydings bill, passed by the Senate, which give the chairman of the Joint Chiefs the pre-eminence to bring military decisions and to stand as a symbol of unification.

In other respects the Armed Services Committee has conformed more nearly to the principles of the Tydings bill by making the Department of Defense a regular executive department and by limiting the items on which the Secretary of Defense must consult with Congress before taking action. Even this limited requirement, however, provides the wedge for a great deal of legislative meddling, and the possibility is increased by the provision which would allow the individual services to go to Congress over the objections of the Secretary of Defense. Secretary Johnson put the issue well the other day when he noted that under the original Vinson scheme Mr. Vinson himself would become the real Secretary of Defense.

The fear still lingers that the Tydings bill somehow would enable the Secretary to become a military dictator. President Truman disposed of that contention rather well, we think, by pointing out that the Constitution makes him the Commander in Chief of the armed forces. A great deal of the concern seems to have arisen over the fact that Secretary Johnson has contrived to take steps toward unification without specific authority in the law. Has the committee considered that by making the authority of the Secretary of Defense specific rather than general, it actually will be limiting his powers while strengthening them?

Chiang In Formosa

The rug that the United States is afraid to pull out from under Chiang Kai-shek is now on display with the generalissimo's arrival in Formosa and his reentry into the news. That rug is becoming almost as famous as the rug that Hitler was wont to chew in his mad moments. The rug under Chiang Kai-shek made the Administration loath to release the Wedemeyer report. It accounted for the secrecy attendant upon the reports submitted by the head of the military mission in Nanking. It is likewise responsible for the hush-hush about the lamentable performance of Chiang Kai-shek as a commander and the arming of the Chinese Communists that was done through the device of arming Chiang Kai-shek. Fear of dislocating the rug, in short, is the reason that the American people have been deprived of the official facts about China, preliminary to the reformulation of a policy toward it. However, Chiang Kai-shek's plea for the "reactivation" of America's pro-Chiang policy will doubtless speed up the White Paper that is said to be in the departmental works.

Confirmation of the appointment of Mr. Walton Butterworth as Assistant Secretary of State for the Far East is being delayed pending issuance of that White Paper. There is some murmuring on the Hill against this appointment. The pro-Chiang Senators seem to feel that a man associated with what is vaguely called our discredited policy in China should have given place to a man totally new to the assignment. What is the policy that the Senators have in mind? They mean the Marshall effort to stop the incipient civil war and encourage Communists and Nationalists to form a coalition government. Mr. Butterworth was with General Marshall in China when he was seeking to carry out that mandate, and then came back to Washington as head of the Far Eastern division of the State Department. The idea is being sedulously circulated that poor General Marshall was sold a bill of goods by alleged appeasers in the foreign service like the correct and conservative Mr. Butterworth. The story is, circumstantially, made up out of whole cloth, for it is an insult to both General Marshall's intelligence and his stature. Anyway, long before General Marshall went to China, the bringing together of Communists and Nationalists had been the object of executive policy, and Ambassador Hurley himself acted as a go-between. We hope that when Mr. Butterworth's nomination is up for consideration, General Marshall will speak a piece that has been left unsaid for too long a time—in his own as well as in Mr. Butterworth's behalf.

Actually there are two China policies that now lie in ruins. One was the one that the Senators have in mind—the attempt to stop the civil war and get the two parties to unite in a popular front. The other was the succeeding aid-Chiang policy after civil war had broken out. This latter, which was even more egregious than the former, was a congressional, not an executive, policy. As to which policy has proved the bigger boomerang, we think the answer is clear, viz, congressional interventionism on the side of Chiang Kai-shek. It has put the Americans at a disadvantage in dealing with the victorious Communists, it is encouraging other nationals to try to steal a march on Americans, and it has armed the Communists and alienated the Chinese people. President and State Department were both against the aid policy, but had to carry out the intervention that Congress authorized.

In the meantime the reformulation of an American policy for the whole Far East is made the more urgent by Chiang Kai-shek's appearance in Formosa. The Formosans have no love for the Chinese Nationalists, who have treated them shockingly since they came into possession of the island, and the unrest is likely to increase, with or without Communist connivance. If Formosa is thrust into the Chinese conflict, then the whole American military strategy in the Far East will be imperiled. Formosa should be redeclared a Japanese possession pending the peace treaty with Japan—even at the expense of pulling the rug out from under Chiang Kai-shek, not to mention the Communists.

Teachers' Loyalty

Twenty-five States, three Territories and the District of Columbia require teachers to take oaths of loyalty to the Government of the United States as a prerequisite to receiving or keeping their jobs. Most of these laws and regulations apply only to teachers in publicly supported schools and colleges, but quite a few cover also those in private or tax-exempt institutions. Five require oaths even of nonprofessional public-school employes.

Most of these laws date back 10 to 25 years. The peak of teacher loyalty oath laws came in the years 1931-35, when 11 States adopted such legislation. Two were added in 1941, but only two more have entered the books since then. Rather, the trend in recent years has been toward a different kind of law—providing for dismissal of "disloyal" teachers, forbidding them to belong to subversive organizations, or, as in two 1949 laws, providing for loyalty checks on teachers.

Meeting in Boston, the department of classroom teachers of the National Education Association has voted unanimously a resolution deploring such discriminatory laws. The sole worth of these laws is as a trap for perjurers, but the price is not worth it. By intimidating the liberal teacher whose questioning mind does not accept as gospel everything approved by the DAR, the American Legion and the Un-American Activities Committee, they menace the very system of free inquiry they are supposed to protect. The teaching profession, in common with society as a whole, is faced with the problem of how to deal with a few subversives among its members. It is perhaps better qualified to do that than any other group. Certainly, teachers neither need nor deserve the opprobrium of special laws singling them out for loyalty procedures not applied to others.

Realities Of The Pact

It is difficult to imagine what entered into Senator Donnell's mind when he said that the Atlantic Pact will persuade the Kremlin to outmatch the West in arms. He talked as if the Russians are relatively unarmed. The fact of the matter is that the significance of the Soviet Union can be gauged only by thinking of it as a totally militarized state. Aside from a huge standing army, which could get to the Channel ports in double-quick time, Moscow within the last month has just turned the entire population into paramilitary formations. Particulars are contained in Izvestia of March 25, and it is there said that the first steps toward the establishment of what is called the "Dosarm" were taken six months before. They apply to all the areas under Soviet control, including eastern Germany.

The way the system works in Russia is this: Organization committees of the "Dosarm" have been set up by representatives who were elected for the borough, the region, and the Soviet Union. In these organizations "citizens of both sexes will learn to handle a gun, a pistol, a machine gun, to drive cars, ride motor bicycles, and to solve military problems." In Germany, where military-paramilitary formations are banned by the Potsdam agreement, the groups are called police organizations, which are subdivided into the Freie Deutsche Jugend and the Pioneers. The latter includes children down to 6 years old.

This kind of activity is hardly consonant with the picture conjured up by Senator Donnell of a peace-loving Kremlin thrust into rearmament by the Atlantic Pact. The only race that is in sight is a race on the part of the Western world to put itself in a military position which would cause the Russians to hesitate over any military adventure. The Atlantic Pact, and the military-aid program which is an inescapable corollary of it, is the only possible policy which comports with both the Russian rearmament and American security. Never before has it been more necessary for America to confront the problem posed by its possession of world power—and by its postwar position as the head and front of the free world. Senator Donnell is closing his eyes to realities, let alone to obligations; and, if his negative attitude were followed, the eyes of his fellow countrymen would have only one use, as the German saying puts it, and that is to weep with.

Market Seer

Wall Street must have got a thrill out of President Truman's tribute to its supposed status as the prime barometer of economic conditions. But the tribute was hardly deserved. The importance of the stock market as a barometer has been on the decline ever since the markets came under strict Federal regulation and high taxes started to take from private incomes the funds which used to be available for investment. Moreover, the trimming that the ordinary man took after the speculative spree of the late 20's has made him wary of putting his hard-earned money into the equities of America's industry. Some day, it is to be hoped, this shyness will vanish, for economic progress requires constant capital expenditure on the replenishment and renewal and erection of plant, and the amount of capital needed to keep one worker employed is increasing. However, that time has not yet arrived, as is shown in the dullness of trading in stocks which has characterized the market for years. The market is so thin nowadays that any sizable transaction for buying or selling a stock is likely to promote a sizable difference in its price.

It was thus a dead and gone past that President Truman brought into the present when he paid his tribute to the stock market by adducing his "bullishness" about economic conditions on the basis of this week's rising performance in the stock market. As if to rebuke him for giving the market such significance, the improvement reported during the week stopped abruptly. It must have been a reminder to the President of the way metal prices started to slump after his March 4 comment that they were in an "upward spiral."

A DREAM

I dreamed of you for seven nights
Successively, and on the last
All the old anguish of the past
Welled up between the past and me.

Now what you have been and shall be
No more concerns me; now my grief
Turns with the turning of the leaf,
Ebbs with the ebbing of the sea.

There are no doors between us now;
All doors destroyed, all bridges down.
Love, like a sacked and ruined town,
Looms in remembrance distantly.

Being a fragment of the past;
The past men dream of with dry eyes.
This is the last of my good-byes . . .
The tired heart breaks, and I am free.

Devaluation

In the column by Robert S. Allen published in The Washington Post of July 1, he made the statement that I had told a group of Republican leaders at a private meeting in Washton that the British pound will be devaluated after Congress passed the multi-billion-dollar ECA appropriation bill.

I made no such statement and I attended no such meeting. Under the circumstances and as a matter of record, I would appreciate it greatly if you would publish my categorical denial of Mr. Allen's statement regarding me. WINTHROP W. ALDRICH

"Statism"

In his letter of June 28, Charles Wallace Collins discussed the word "statism," noting that while one of your recent editorials spelled it without an "e," the Government Printing Office and also General Eisenhower spell it "stateism." Mr. Collins feels that this word—though too new to be found in the dictionary—is much more descriptive than such words as "totalitarianism" and "egalitarianism."

As a matter of fact, the word "statism" (sic) appears in my 35-year-old Funk & Wagnalls New Standard Dictionary, which defines it as "statecraft" or "policy," but marks it obsolete.

Suspecting that the word in its current sense had been adapted from the French language, I consulted my two-volume Larousse Universe which bears the copyright date of 1922. In this highly authoritative dictionary I found the word "etatisme," which was defined as "socialisme d'etat" (i. e., state socialism).

Clearly, then, the word "statism" is but a synonym for socialism. Furthermore, it appears actually to be older (at least in its original French form) than the word "totalitarianism." For my Larousse fails to list either "totalitaire" or "totalitarisme," though recently I have met both in a French newspaper.

The spelling "statism" obviously is the correct one. When a new word is introduced into the language its spelling naturally follows that of similar words already accepted.

Segregated Swimming

In an attempt to answer the letter on "Segregated Swimming" in your issue of July 3, I do not think that prejudice is necessarily relegated to the "ignorant and the bigots," for all humans, regardless of their particular environments, acquire prejudices throughout life. Since this is factual, prejudice will never be eradicated. Education should, however, help all to rationalize in all things, including emotions regarding "fear for one's health and safety." I therefore think the gentleman, like many others, confuses the issue so vital to our democratic principles, by approaching it emotionally rather than by pure reasoning.

All citizens in a democratic nation are expected to assume the duties and obligations, both moral and statutory, which are necessary for its perpetuity, among those being the payment of taxes, voting, obedience of laws, and military service. It is to be expected that some of these duties will not be pleasant and some may affect us emotionally.

Since all must share the obligations, all should share the benefits which accrue; especially those which are tax-supported, which some would attempt to make exclusive. If then, any citizen's emotional repugnance is too great to tolerate enjoyment of public facilities with any and all other citizens, he should resort to the alternative—to forgo such facilities or afford the exclusiveness of private facilities.

THEODORE A. SHELL.

Atlantic Union

In this historic moment, when the ratification of the Atlantic Pact is pending and all "men of vision" are seeking insurance against the horrors of atomic and biological warfare, this letter would urge attention to, and a wider understanding of, the work of the Atlantic Union Committee.

The "objective in the Atlantic Union Committee is to have the Congress pass a resolution supporting the calling of a constitutional convention of at least the Atlantic Pact sponsors . . . This convention would explore the possibility of a political, economic and military union among the democracies in the Atlantic Union area."

The defensive might of such a union would be so overwhelming that no potential aggressor would dare attack. This union would greatly strengthen the United Nations and would lower the cost of military security for all. Union now would result in tremendous economies in many governmental expenditures.

The Atlantic Union Committee is a oncrete movement toward this end. All those interested in this momentous undertaking can obtain information from the local office, 1111 17th st., nw., Washington, and from the Atlantic Union Committee, 537 Fifth ave., New York City.

"Dark Age"

The groundswell from the left and the squealing from the panic-propelled right have so contrived to throw all cerebration out of gear that a patriotic American who blends intelligence with patriotism cannot avoid concern.

An American who loves his country—and knows the reasons—equally abhors the methods of all snoops, and he is afraid of power, no matter who wields it. He wants nothing for himself, for he has learned that the only worthwhile rewards stem from the help he gives to others. Caught in the act, he admits that he is probably a selfish extrovert. Appraising the value of gadgets, he wonders if the so-called groundswell from the left is actually in character. Perhaps it signifies only a terrible swindle—a trade of birth-rights for television sets.

The intelligently patriotic American looks to the curve of history and tries to project its lines. To do so, he must find the detachment of the hilltop. He may not have detachment. He is pinned down. He must be for or against. If he is not a true believer, he has got to be a Communist.

A tolerant, patriotic American—awfully amused—knows that he and the handful that remains with him will be among the very first to mount the scaffold in the coming madness. He will not worry for his head. It is only a tired, old head, let him lose it to the commissars or to the holy inquisition. This American who, with his grandfathers, has fought in all of his country's wars, does wonder if he should continue in the "passions of the times" philosophy of Justice Holmes, or abandon himself to the despair of Henry Adams.

He wonders and worries and frets that there has to be another dark age, and ponders if there can ever, ever be another renaissance. HARRY A. KINNEY.
Washington.

Jacobs' Stand On Federal Aid

Having devoted much of my life to the promotion of goodwill among religious groups, and served as a former speaker for the National Catholic, Protestant and Jewish Brotherhood, I am greatly enheartened by the statements of Representative Andrew Jacobs, a Roman Catholic, as reported by Drew Pearson in his column of July 1.

Mr. Jacobs insists that Government aid for church schools creates a divisive issue. He lends particular satisfaction to those whose efforts are dedicated to the preservation of cordial and cooperative church-state relations. Nothing could be more disastrous to national unity than for a religious group to secure Government aid for its institutions.

This is not to depreciate the emphasis which the Roman Catholics put upon religion in education. All of us rejoice in the American constitutional right of every religious group to conduct its own schools, and in every parent's right to select any school preferred. Religious denominations thus are absolutely free to provide schools, and they all do.

Protestants doubtless in the aggregate have more schools than our Roman Catholic brethren, but so far as I know, none of the Protestant groups is asking for any Government aid. On the contrary, each has gone on record as opposing any Government grants directly or indirectly to church or private schools. Such grants would in their judgment constitute an encroachment upon the constitutional principle of separation of church and state which alone safeguards or guarantees the religious rights for every individual and group.

It has required unbiased thinking and high courage on Mr. Jacobs' part to make such an utterance as he has made. He should be hailed by all Americans as an honest, broad-minded patriot and statesman sincerely engaged in working for what is best for the state and what is best for the churches.

In this connection, I lament the tendency of certain members of Congress to impose frequent lengthy sectarian reproductions from their clergy on the Appendix to the Congressional Record. As a constant reader of that valuable publication, I note that it is a rare day when certain well-known zealots among the Congressmen fail to burden the Record with partisan pieces.

Not that I object to debate. In a democracy public issues should be argued until all the merits have been exposed and evaluated. As a churchman I do not believe mine or any church is so sacrosanct that its policies shall be held exempt from examination and criticism. Least of all do I feel that our Representatives should be deprived of open declarations as to their conceptions of constitutional legislation.

But if the Record's Appendix is to permit unlimited debate on controversial issues, one side should at no time be allowed to monopolize its pages.

Formulas For Diplomats

By Malvina Lindsay

Double Standard

LIKE ALL women in prominent jobs, Mrs. Perle Mesta when she goes to the Grand Duchy of Luxembourg as this country's Minister, will face a greater challenge than a man would. For women in public life still must undergo more criticism and more searching demands for performance than men.

She also will have to live up to the records of two capable women who have preceded her as diplomats, Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, former Minister to Norway, and Mrs. Ruth Bryan Rohde, former Minister to Denmark. In addition, Mrs. Mesta will have to prove that a reputation as a party-giver is no handicap to serious diplomacy. This penchant for entertaining is a personal hobby no man candidate for a high diplomatic post has heretofore had to defend, though probably some of them have been in their way as active socially as Mrs. Mesta.

This writer has no personal knowledge of the qualifications of Mrs. Mesta for her post. But if the social and personal side of a diplomat's life is to be raised for women, it should also be raised for men. For example, the next time the name of J. Goodfellow Midas is brought up for confirmation as an Ambassador or Minister to some country at which he can meet the financial demands of the job, we should logically expect Senate debate to run as follows:

SENATOR X—I question the qualifications of this man Midas. In the first place he's rich.

Senator Y—That shows what a shrewd businessman he is. Haven't we all been saying that what those shiftless European countries need is for some hard-headed American businessman to go over and straighten out their socialistic messes.

Senator X—But didn't this fellow Midas inherit most of his money from his mother and later his wife?

Senator Y—Yes, Mr. Midas inherited some money. But he made a lot more by smart handling of it. Let me ask the disinguished Senator how you can make money without capital? And is it any crime yet in this country to inherit money?

Senator X—I'm not opposing Mr. Midas just because he's rich or because he made campaign contributions, or even because he's a man. I have no sex prejudice in regard to public office. The trouble is he's not qualified.

Senator Y—How could he not be qualified if he's a good business man?

Senator X—I mean he's too much of a party giver. May I ask how many of the distinguished Senators have been guests on his yacht cruises? How many have sat in at his poker parties? How many have gone in his car to the Kentucky Derby? How many have attended his smokers and stag parties, been weekend guests at his so-called farm, and played on his private golf links? How many have had drinks out of his office refrigerator, smoked his 50-cent cigars?

Senator Z—May I ask how the distinguished Senators who have enjoyed all this hospitality of Mr. Midas have been able to perform the heavy duties they were sent here to do?

Senator X—I move for a vote!

SO LONG as top diplomatic posts are awarded so largely as political plums, wealthy women who contribute to and work for the party should have their chance at them on the same basis as men. Senator Donnell had one effective point in his opposition to Mrs. Mesta's appointment when he urged an end of politics in the award of diplomatic posts, and the use of specially qualified career diplomats.

As in the Postoffice Department the day will inevitably come when the career men and women in this country's Foreign Service can aspire to its highest appointments. Then the boys and girls who pass the stiff examinations, go through the rigid training the State Department gives them, and then spend years upon years in the far corners of the world, often at personal sacrifice, learning the hard way to deal with people of all sorts of backgrounds and cultures, will have the incentive of working in a field in which there is no ceiling on their efforts.

True, career diplomats today do get into top posts occasionally, but the procedure could well be speeded up. Ambassadors and ministers need to be taken out of politics and the amateur class as badly as do postmasters.

Washington's Warning

Despite rationalizations of proponents, the North Atlantic Pact is a suicide pact.

Listen to the Father of our Country! "Avoid the necessity of those overgrown military establishments which, under any form of government, are inauspicious to liberty. Permanent, inveterate antipathies against particular nations . . . should be excluded. Observe good faith and justice towards all nations; cultivate peace and harmony with all."

Can there be any excuse for any Senator today not knowing what George Washington came to know? All they who take the sword shall perish with the sword.

GEORGE M. STOCKDALE

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

Roots Of The Financial Crisis

THE BIG headlines about the pound and the dollar hide the real meaning of the crisis faced by western Europe and the United States. As Secretary of the Treasury John Snyder and Sir Stafford Cripps, Chancellor of the Exchequer, sit down to debate money and trade policies, they will, in reality, be debating what kind of temporary poultice to apply to a major maladjustment.

Childs

A few officials here in Washington understand that. But they are for the most part on the lower levels, and when they dare to speak out loud they are not listened to. One of them put it this way:

"The enormous productive power of the United States has made the economic isolation of this country inevitable unless radical steps are taken quickly. No other country can even begin to compete with the American productive machine. Even in the field of raw materials, as a result of the war, America is pulling away from the rest of the world."

Thus imports of raw rubber from the Far East have been dropping in recent months. Rubber from Malaya was an important source of dollars for the British before the war. A new process now being put into production in this country makes synthetic rubber superior to the natural product and at a competitive price.

Take, as another example, Chilean nitrates, the sale of which is important to Chile's economy. By a synthetic process these can now be manufactured more cheaply in this country.

One product—nylon—developed in the main since 1939, cuts across several raw material supplies, conspicuously silk. Fibers imported from the Philippines and elsewhere for rope and containers are being replaced by synthetic mass production here at home.

ALL THIS is reflected in the figures. Last year the United States exported to Europe more than three times as much as was imported from Europe.

The British-Argentine trade pact is only one example of the kind of barter trade that almost every country is being forced into by the colossus of American competition. More than 300 such bilateral trade pacts are in effect in an ever-narrowing economic pattern.

The answer? Here you get on such delicate political ground that even lesser officials hesitate to talk. But what they are saying gets down to the following:

"This country is giving away several billions a year under the European Recovery Program. But that is not enough to balance the gap created by America's enormous surplus of exports—in reality America's enormous surplus of production which is way above the volume of goods sufficient to sustain the high prosperity standards of the post-war years here at home.

"The only hope is for immediate action on President Truman's Point IV on a far more radical scale than anyone in responsible official position has as yet contemplated. We must send abroad not merely know-how but American machines to build up production in other areas.

"This must be done by private American capital, perhaps guaranteed by this Government. If that proves impossible, or too slow, then it must be done through Government loans or grants."

A GREAT MANY people back away in horror from this suggestion. Why, they say, that would be giving away American production. And if we're going to give it away, why not give it to our own people?

This last has a logical sound until it is examined more closely. To give away the surplus of American production here at home would mean a radical change in the American system. Given away on the low level of relief to those already out of work, a mere trickle flows out of the surplus bins, and the result is more unemployment.

The answer then is to export American production by any and all means. It must be made possible for so-called backward peoples to raise their own standards and then eventually they may become customers for America's high technology—radios, television and so on.

If this sounds like a fantasy of the heat wave, so also do the uneasy murmurings of those who can think of nothing except the old formula and who complacently suggest that somehow American exports and imports be put into balance. As though shearing off six to seven billions in exports would not create depression out of recession.

Even if such a balance could be achieved, this country would still be faced with economic isolation. Whether anyone at the top will have the courage and imagination to face the reality and act on it is a question. On that answer a lot depends.

Deadlocked Hiss Jury Is Dismissed

cember 16, the day after a Federal grand jury indicted him on two counts of perjury: for denying he saw Chambers after January 1, 1947, and for denying that in February and March, 1938—while Hiss was assistant to Assistant Secretary of State Francis B. Sayre—he supplied documents for a Communist espionage ring.

Each count carries a maximum penalty of five years in prison and $2000 fine.

James F. Hanrahan, a marine accountant from the Bronx and No. 2 man on the jury, said those who voted for a not guilty verdict were: Foreman H. E. James, Mrs. Louise A. Torian, dressmaker; Louis Hill, of the Bronx, secretary of the Manhattan Bargain House, and Arthur L. Pawlinger, a mail advertising man.

Hanrahan said the four voted not guilty because "although they could trace the typewriter to the Hiss' house they could not visualize the Hisses transmitting the documents to Whittaker Chambers.

Hammering Away

"The eight of us were pounding the hell out of them since last night," Hanrahan said. "Oh, you could see the four of them, sitting there, . . . everybody took a whack at them, but no good."

"We were all hammering away at them, till I was up to here," Hanrahan said, grasping his neck, "trying to sway them."

Hanrahan said the jury balloted only twice, the first time at 4:50 p. m. yesterday, by secret written ballot, only 30 minutes after the jury had received the case.

He said the vote was four for guilty, four for not guilty and four undecided.

Thus, the jury members were not even agreed on how they disagreed.

Foreman James said that the first ballot was taken a few minutes after the jury got the case yesterday afternoon and that it took so many ballots during the course of deliberations that he never counted them. He said, however, that on every single ballot from first to last the vote was eight for guilty and four for not guilty.

Positions Unchanged

He said nobody changed their positions throughout the balloting. He refused to comment any further.

Mrs. Torian said she voted "not guilty" throughout. She said that the discussions were peaceable, but "we just didn't see things the same way, that's all."

Mrs. Helen Sweatt, real estate broker, said that the people who voted not guilty did not believe what Chambers said on the witness stand, nor did they believe that Mrs. Hiss typed any documents or that Hiss delivered them to Chambers.

"We tried the typewriter out and went over the documents," Mrs. Sweatt said. "We took a long time tonight because we went over the documents again, word by word."

Mrs. Sweatt said that she based her vote of guilty on the evidence contained in the documents.

Mrs. Sweatt said that it was Murphy's summation of the Government's case that "strengthened the trend of thought" of the eight jurors who voted for conviction.

"All of us eight who voted for a guilty verdict said that the summation was the turning point," she said.

"Up to then, some of the eight had wavered."

Mrs. Sweatt said that Murphy in his summation "was able to clarify" some things which had not been clear in some of the jurors minds.

When Judge Kaufman sent the jurors back to their deliberations for the second time after they had reported inability to agree, he told them, at 5:02 p. m., that failure to agree might mean the case would have to be retried.

"This case," the judge said, "has taken nearly six weeks to try. The expense to the Government and the defense has been very, very great."

The judge asked the jury to "make one additional try in the interest of the Government, in the interest of the defense and in the interest of the public, to determine this case."

Judge Repeats Charge

The jurors gave one indication earlier in the day as to the points deadlocking them.

WHITTAKER CHAMBERS
Farming in Maryland

Just before noon, at their request, Judge Kaufman repeated a portion of his charge on "corroborative and circumstantial evidence."

This indicated Hiss' fate might rest on whether the jury believes the Government produced enough evidence to back up the statement of Chambers that Hiss gave him State Department secrets.

Hiss' denial led to the perjury charges.

When the deadlock was reported in midafternoon, the judge reread a section of his charge dealing with opinions of individual jurors.

He told the jurors that "undoubtedly the verdict of the jury should represent the opinion of each individual juror. But that does not mean that opinions may not be changed or exchanged in the jury room."

"The jury system," he warned, "will not function if every juror goes into the jury room determined that his and his view alone must prevail, and that he and only he has seen the light."

However, the judge emphasized that no juror was obligated to change his opinion.

Call Sent Out for Typewriter

The reporting of a deadlock marked the third time the jury broke the silence of its deliberations since it took the case yesterday.

The first time was at 3:53 p. m., yesterday, when a call was sent out for a typewriter, for documents which the Government says Hiss turned over to Chambers and for other exhibits.

The second time was this morning when the jurors asked the judge to repeat his instructions on corroborative evidence.

Chambers was the key witness against Hiss.

Judge Kaufman made clear in his charge, which the jury asked him to reread that it was not enough for it to believe Chambers. He told the jurors:

"Under the law, no person may be convicted of perjury unless the falsity of the statements made by the defendant under oath be established by the testimony of two independent witnesses or by one witness and corroborating facts and circumstances. Unles that has been done, you must acquit the defendant."

He told the jurors they were not concerned with the reason for the rule that there could be no conviction based on testimony of a single witness without corroboration.

"Suffice it to say," he explained, "that this rule of law is deeply rooted in the American system of jurisprudence and it is the law that must govern you."

Law Is Set Forth

"Even if you believe Chambers," the judge declared, "if you do not find corroboration of his testimony, to establish beyond a reasonable doubt the falsity of the defendant's testimony, before the grand jury, as set forth in the indictment, your verdict must be 'not guilty.'"

The judge got at the point another way. To be sufficient for a conviction, he said, the Government's evidence "must corroborate that portion of Mr. Chambers' testimony which relates to the furnishing, delivering and transmission of documents to Chambers as alleged in the indictment.

"Mere corroboration of other portions of Mr. Chambers' testimony does not meet the requirement of the law applicable in perjury cases."

The necessary corroboration, Judge Kaufman said, could come from other prosecution witnesses or documents introduced by the Government.

These included four notes acknowledged by Hiss to be in his handwriting and 43 typed copies of paraphrases of State Department documents.

Chambers said Hiss gave these to him. Hiss denied it.

On the point of circumstantial evidence asked about by the jury, the judge said evidence, "to be sufficient in this case, must be not merely consistent with the guilt of the defendant; it must be inconsistent with any reasonable hypothesis of innocence and susceptible of no reasonable hypothesis other than that of guilt."

Probe of Hiss Judge Demanded by Nixon

By the United Press

Representative Nixon (R., Calif.), said last night there should be an immediate investigation of Federal Judge Samuel J. Kaufman's conduct during the Alger Hiss perjury trial to determine his "fitness" to serve on the bench.

Nixon, a member of the House Committee on Un-American Activities, said the jury's 8-to-4 vote for conviction of Hiss on the perjury charges "came frankly as a surprise to me."

He said he had expected a verdict for acquittal because Kaufman's "prejudice for the defense and against the prosecution was so obvious and apparent."

"It is my intention," he said, "that the full facts shall be presented in due time."

He added that "I know that this intention is shared by a number of my colleagues."

"When the full facts of the conduct of this trial are laid before the Nation,' he said, "I believe the people will be shocked."

Atomic Power 15 Years Off, Scientist Says

Enrico Fermi, Italian-born physicist who set off the first nuclear chain reaction in 1942, predicts it will be 15 to 20 years before the development of atomic power for commercial or industrial purposes.

He told the Joint Congressional Committee on Atomic Energy yesterday that his prediction presupposed the Government would continue its support to atomic research; otherwise the 15 years would become 30 or more.

He said he believed atomic power would supplement rather than compete with existing power. Atomic fuels, he said, are very light, and may be of far more value than scientists can now accurately predict.

Fermi, another top scientist and two industrialists yesterday defended the commission and Chairman David E. Lilienthal against charges of "incredible mismanagement."

Fermi said the results of the atomic program during its first 2½ years under civilian controls have been "far greater than I expected."

The scientist said he was heartily in accord with the statement of Lee DuBridge, president of the California Institute of Technology, that atomic scientists are afraid that requiring FBI investigations of atomic fellowship students may lead to a "police state."

"It is my duty to state," Fermi said with a quiet smile, "that such FBI investigations as I know were carried out in a considerate manner." He added that FBI questions were fair and that so far as he had observed there had never been an attempt made to coax him into a damaging admission.

But, he said, he did notice a general "preoccupation" among scientists with the fear of being investigated, because being people of inquiring minds scientists didn't want to take anything, even the statement that Communism is not a good thing, for granted.

Hickenlooper Smiles

Senator Hickenlooper (R., Iowa) smiled broadly. "Then," he asked, "why should there be any criticism of the responsibility for Government to look into the mysteries of a man's background, and not take anything for granted?"

"That is a very good question," Fermi replied. "I am afraid I have no answer."

DuBridge told the committee the AEC has had 'superb success" in weapons, that its production of fissionable materials has been "very successful" and that it has made "enormous strides" in peacetime applications.

Dubridge said the AEC fellowship program is most important, and added that if FBI investigation were applied to applicants for nonsecret research it would spread basic fears of a police state.

Industrialists Testify

Industrialists praising AEC were James W. Parker, president and general manager of the Detroit Edison Co., and Isaac Harter, chairman of the board of the Babcock & Wilcox Co., Beaver Falls, Pa.

Parker praised the readiness of AEC to accept constructive criticism, and Harter lauded the agency's accomplishments.

Public hearings of the commission's side of the case will be completed Monday. A study of how the commission has acted in individual loyalty cases will be held in executive session.

'KKK, Lynchers, Police Brutes Violent,' Says Red in N.Y. Trial

New York, July 8 (U.P.)—Benjamin Davis, jr., Negro defendant in the Communist conspiracy trial testified today that the "Ku Kluxers, the lynchers, and the police brutes" and not the Communists were the advocates of force and violence.

Davis said the charge against him and 10 other top United States Communists was "one of the strangest things in the world." They are accused of conspiring to teach and advocate the forceful overthrow of the Government.

"This charge comes from the Fascist forces that are using it as a smoke screen to protect the Ku Kluxers, the lynchers and the police brutes who practice force and violence," he declared.

When Federal Judge Harold R. Medina asked the witness if he had ever refuted the charge publicly, Davis replied:

"I said it was just a pure slanderous and Hitlerian distortion of the position of our party."

Davis, a New York City councilman, related at length details of his political campaigns, in which he said he made speeches protesting "police brutality against the Negro people."

He said most people have the wrong idea about the Communist Party and that it abhors violence.

For the third time since he took the witness stand yesterday, Davis drew a warning from Medina against discussing subjects in his testimony which the court had ruled inadmissable.

"There have been various times when my directions have been deliberately disobeyed," Medina said sternly. "I should think someone connected with the defense would have enough sense to advise his client not to do this."

As the trial ended its twenty-fifth week, Davis was only the third defendant to testify.

Probers Ask Jackie Robinson 'To Give the Lie' to Robeson

Jackie Robinson, Brooklyn second baseman, was among a number of prominent Negroes invited yesterday by the House Un-American Activities Committee to "give the lie" to singer Paul Robeson's prediction of Negro disloyalty in a war with Russia.

Chairman Wood (D., Ga.) said the Negroes had been asked to appear Tuesday in response to appeals by Negroes for a chance to answer Robeson.

Purpose of the hearings, Wood said, was "to give the lie to statements by singer Paul Robeson that American Negroes wouldn't fight in case of a war with Russia."

Other prominent Negroes invited to testify were Lester Granger, executive secretary of the National Urban League; Charles S. Johnson, Fisk University sociologist; and the Rev. Sandy Ray of Brooklyn.

Jackie Robinson Pledges To Fight 'Any Aggressor'

New York, July 8 (U.P.)—Baseball star Jackie Robinson, who has been invited to testify before the House Un-American Activities Committee on the loyalty of American Negroes, today said he would "fight any aggressor."

The principal purpose of the hearings will be to discount statements by singer Paul Robeson that American Negroes would not fight in any war against Russia.

"I'd fight any aggressor—that includes any aggressor, as well as the Russians," the Brooklyn Dodger second baseman said. "I've been treated very well and I'll fight anyone who tries to take away from me my American heritage. I want to fight for my child's right to live in this country, and for any other child's."

Asked what he thought of Robeson's statement, Robinson replied: "All I can say is that Paul Robeson speaks only for Paul Robeson. I'm not too familiar with what he said, and I'll have to study it before I can comment on it."

Robinson said that Branch Rickey, president of the Dodgers, would have to decide whether or not he goes to the hearing since the club is in the midst of a tough pennant race.

Statements a 'Disservice'

The Rev. Sandy Ray, a Brooklyn minister and chairman of the social action department of the National Baptist Convention, which represents some 4 million Negroes, praised Robeson for his "artistry, which has redounded to the benefit of the Negro people.

"I feel though," he continued, "that his political statements do a disservice to us all. Negroes feel that even with a lack of application of democracy in America, they still have faith in America.

"Whatever our problems within the country, we'll thrash them out here . . . contrary to the impressions given by certain spokesmen, we do not have any appreciable number of Negro people going into the Communist Party."

Mitchell and Elman Score In Concert at Watergate

By Paul Hume

Howard Mitchell's reading of Tschaikowsky's Fourth Symphony during last night's Watergate concert was a masterly exposition.

This popular score has latent tendencies in the direction of pure ham. If a conductor does not have both the gift for theatrical effects and enough good taste to play the music as the composer wrote it, he cannot avert trouble.

Mitchell's tempos were superb. What is more, he sustained them in moments where many conductors take all kinds of liberties. The orchestra was in top shape and played with great style. There was real precision in the pizzicato section and the interplay of brass and woodwinds was smoothly dovetailed.

After intermission Mischa Elman played Lalo's Spanish Symphony. His sumptuous tone, laid on with a $50,000 Stradivarius, was like yogurt. His knowledge of the score led him to give the second movement all the Spanish rhythm and color it deserved, and he sang the slow lines of the andante with full sweeping notes.

There were times when Elman preferred his own ideas of rhythmic precision to Lalo's or even to Mitchell's. But the solid support provided him by the orchestra could not be improved on, and he came along dutifully. In fairness to the noted violinist we must add that he was strafed by more airplanes than we remember during any other single composition.

Encores, given in response to a near-ovation, were Bach's Air for the G String and a set of Gypsy Airs Elman has long since abandoned any pretense of playing Bach as Bach wrote it. He sounded as if he was still in the Lalo Spanish Symphony. Even his scoops seemed rich and full. But the Gypsy Airs were virtuosity all over the place and won the artist even greater applause.

The program wound up with a Washington premiere of Elie Siegmeister's suite, Sunday in Brooklyn. We might propose a subtitle: Gershwin's Tomb. Syncopations, harmonic and melodic devices, and even the orchestration, is all so reminiscent.

Even so the music was pleasant, well made, and appropriate. True Brooklynites no doubt resent anything called Sunday in Brooklyn which omits all reference to the Dodgers, but you can't have everything.

Sunday night: Zadel Skolovsky in Ravel's piano concerto, plus the Tristan Prelude and Love Death.

Guild Unit Seeks Strike Against 4 Magazines

New York, July 8 (AP).—The Time, Inc., unit of the CIO Newspaper Guild has asked union permission to call a strike against Time, Life, Fortune and Architectural Forum magazines.

The unit, by a 123-to-14 vote, last night requested the action, which must come from the representative assembly, governing body of the New York Guild.

Besides the magazines, the unit also wants the way to be cleared for a strike against "March of Time" motion pictures.

A spokesman for the Time Guild unit said its request "will be acted on within a week." The group said Time, Inc., has "sought to shackle the unit with an antediluvian contract."

The dispute, the spokesman said, includes wages, job security, guarantees against wage cuts and grievance adjustments.

Time, Inc., owner of the various enterprises involved, did not comment.

O'Dwyer Weighs Plan To Run for Reelection

New York, July 8 (U.P.)—Mayor William O'Dwyer, 58, said today he had agreed to reconsider running for election and would give his final decision next week.

O'Dwyer said nearly two months ago that he would not be a candidate again. But Democratic leaders, who feel his name on the ballot would improve their chances of winning a special election in November to pick a successor to Robert F. Wagner as United States Senator, have been putting increasing pressure on him.

Week's Trade In U.S. Gained, Agency Finds

The dollar volume of retail sales over the country increased moderately in the week ended Wednesday but was slightly less than in the corresponding 1948 week, Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., the credit agency, reported yesterday. July clearances started in many places and shoppers generally responded favorably to them.

Demand for lightweight apparel was stimulated by the high temperatures in many communities. Volume in women's bathing suits, sun-dresses, shorts, skirts and housedresses was moderately larger. Mark-down sales of men's shirts attracted considerable attention and tropical worsted suits remained popular. Promotions of rayon suits also were well received.

Purchases of food were about equal to those of the preceding week and unit volume was practically unchanged from the high level of a year ago.

While the interest in furniture dipped slightly, the demand for other home furnishings rose noticeably. Small kitchen appliances, electric fans, refrigerators, fiber rugs and curtains were sold in increased volume.

RETAIL TRADE: Sales of department stores in the Fifth Federal Reserve District were 4 per cent less in the week ended July 2 than in the corresponding period a year ago, but the decline in Washington stores was only 2 per cent, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond reported yesterday. The decline in the district for the four weeks ended July 2 was 2 per cent but sales in Washington were unchanged in comparison with the corresponding period of 1948.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: Stanley E. Selonick, vice president in charge of sales of the Goodall Co., makers of Palm Beach and other men's suits, has resigned. Trade sources insisted this action had no connection with the recent storm among retailers over the premature disclosure of plans to cut the price of the suits in a sale starting July 11. . . . Seven precautions to avoid double taxation from the sale of corporate stock are outlined by Seymour S. Mintz of Hogan & Hartson, Washington attorneys, in the July issue of the Journal of Accountancy. . . . Charles Lukens Huston, first vice president of the Lukens Steel Co., celebrated his 94th birthday yetsterday.

ODD LOTS: The National Coal Association estimates that bituminous production last week was only 1,365,000 tons because of the miners' vacation. Normal output is about 11 million tons a week. Retail sales in Maryland in 1948 aggregated $1,876,999,000, the Maryland State Planning Commission announced yesterday . . . Revenue freight car loadings in the week ending July 2 totaled 644,182, a decrease of 158,759 from the preceding week, the Association of American Railroads reported. The decline in coal loadings amounted to 148,333 cars.

Auto Output Cut By July 4 Holiday

Detroit, July 8 (AP).—The Fourth of July holiday trimmed auto production in United States and Canadian plants to 116,878 cars and trucks this week, Ward's Automotive Reports estimated today.

Last week, the same plants turned out 144,822 vehicles.

Volume production, enhanced by nine-hour shifts in some plants, offset production losses from scattered walkouts because of the heat and kept the daily automotive assembly output at 29,000 units, Ward's reported.

Nash Car Deliveries Set 20-Year Records

Detroit, July 8 (AP).—Nash motors division of Nash-Kelvinator Corporation said today its new car deliveries for June reached the highest volume for that month in 20 years.

H. C. Doss, vice president in charge of sales, added that Nash's sales for the last 10 days of June were the highest of any 10-day period of any month in the last 20 years.

Doss attributed the sales record in part to "a return to competitive selling in showrooms and advertising."

Price of Lead Raised 1c To 13c In New York

New York, July 8 (AP).—The price of lead was raised one cent to 13 cents a pound, New York basis, today by a leading custom smelter.

This was the first boost in lead since the price declined from the record peak of 21½ cents started on March 8. The postwar low of 12 cents since May 26.

Legal Dispute Halts Prichard Ballot Trial

To Seek Evidence

15 Lawyers Hired in War On Lobbyists

By Robert S. Allen

Attorney General Tom Clark has ordered the employment of 15 additional lawyer-investigators in an intensified drive against illegal lobbying in Washington.

Clark took this step with the strong approval of President Truman.

The new investigators will be added to the staff of Assistant Attorney General Alexander Campbell, head of the criminal division. He has been warring on illicit lobbyists for a long time. Last year he caused the indictment of former Representative Roger Slaughter (D., Mo.) for failing to register as a lobbyist.

"Until now our big problem has been lack of manpower and funds," Campbell said. "The 15 additional investigators that Attorney General Clark has authorized will take care of the manpower question. We plan to spend the summer getting evidence and preparing cases. By fall we expect to be ready to seek indictments of certain consistent violators of the Lobby Registration Act."

Woman's Tip 'Breaks' Case

he got setting the fire in the grill. He was an employe there.

Atzott and detectives of the general assignment squad, who questioned Corley after Mrs. Campbell's tip, said he confessed and made a statement admitting he set the fire at Baker's instigation. The owner was taken to the hospital, confronted with Corley and heard Corley's signed statement read, officers said. Baker refused to make any statement.

Two Others Booked

Also booked in the case as material witnesses were Mrs. Marian Neal Baker, alias Hirsch, a waitress in the grill, and Charles M. Thorne, 1612 H st. se., a friend of Corley.

Atzott and detectives gave the following version of the case:

Corley was brought into Casualty Hospital late Tuesday night from a gasoline station on 11th st. se. He said his clothing caught fire from grease he had rubbed while fixing his auto. He said he was unemployed.

Later, Mrs. Campbell was asked by a man and a girl who came to Casualty Hospital about Corley's condition. She questioned them and they said they were his fellow employes at Tex's Grill. She read a story in The Washington Post about the fire at the grill, she told officers. Then she talked with detectives who visited the hospital on another case.

An investigation into the fire already was under way because Baker, who returned to Washington the morning after the fire, reported $2100 had been stolen during or immediately before the blaze.

The officers checked Corley's story and found there had been no fire at the filling station. Then they questioned him and he told a complete story.

He told them, they said, that Baker had approached him asking him to set the fire on a Tuesday when the grill was closed. He debated with himself, but finally decided to do it. The last debate, he said, took more than an hour, Tuesday night, inside the place.

Then, he said, he poured several cans of gasoline, which he said Baker provided, over stock in the place and lit a match. The gasoline, he said, flashed back and ignited his shirt. He said he got out, took a cab to the gasoline station and subsequently went to Casualty Hospital.

Corley told officers, they said, that Baker promised him $500 in cash, $50 a week while Tex's Grill was closed and a subsequent partnership in a similar place Baker planned to open in Baltimore.

Atzott and detectives said they learned the grill had done a business of $100,000 a year during the war, with 14 delivery vehicles distributing food, mostly chicken, over the city on telephone orders.

Recently, they said, business had declined sharply, and Baker had to sell two delivery jeeps to meet the premium on his $100,000 fire insurance policy.

When Baker was first questioned, he said he had been at Hagerstown, Md., where he owns a horse, Flying High, and later at the race track at Charles Town, W. Va.

He told officers a file cabinet containing the $2100 had been moved from his second-floor apartment to the basement and the money taken. Corley, officers said, moved the cabinet himself and battered it to make fake evidence of a robbery.

When Mrs. Baker was questioned, police found $1400 in cash on her. She said she had saved it from her $30-a-week salary at the grill. Later, officers said, she stated that Baker told her "the place will be burned down" when they returned from an out-of-town trip.

She was released under $500 bond as a material witness by Commissioner Lawrence. Thorne, a friend of Corley, who police said was with Corley until he went back to the grill, was released on his own recognizance, although he was booked as a material witness.

Police said Baker has a police record dating back to 1933, when he was arrested for gambling. They said that in 1933 he was sentenced to three years in Atlanta Penitentiary for counterfeiting; in 1937, six months for parole violation; and in 1940, three years in Lewisburg, (Pa.) Penitentiary, also for counterfeiting.

Lexington, Ky., July 8 (AP).—A ticklish legal dispute over admitting to record the testimony of a Kentucky circuit judge and his lawyer-son arose today in the Bourbon County vote fraud trial.

The development came after the testimony of an FBI agent who said the name of E. F. Prichard, jr., on a ballot matched the "known writing furnished to me as that of A. E. Funk, jr."

The agent made the identification by comparing writing on the forged ballots with that the Government claimed was Funk's.

Prichard, once a New Deal handy man, and Funk, his Lexington law partner, are on trial in Federal Court here charged with conspiring to forge and vote 254 ballots in the presidential election last November.

The legal question developed as the prosecution sought to call Circuit Judge W. B. Ardery of Paris and his son, Philip P. Ardery, a Frankfort attorney and former law partner of Prichard, as witnesses.

Federal Judge H. Church Ford dismissed the jury of 11 men and 1 woman before hearing the Ardery and Prichard testify in open court.

He said he would hear additional arguments on the question in chambers Saturday and would announce his decision when court resumes Monday.

"In Deep Trouble," He Said

The defense objected to the Ardeys testifying on grounds that Prichard had established a formal attorney-client relationship with the men.

(When the Federal grand jury which returned the indictment against Prichard and Funk was in session it called Phil Ardery as a witness. An identical question arose at that time and Ardery did not testify.)

Judge Ardery said his son and Prichard came to his house at Paris last November 7. He quoted Prichard as saying:

"Judge, I am in deep trouble and I want your advice."

"I thought I could give him advice if I did not charge him and if anything transpired I would step aside in the case."

Ardery's district includes bourbon county, the site of the irregularities and Prichard's home.

Guthrie Crowe, State police commissioner, said Prichard came to his office at Frankfort and reported he was interested in the ballot box stuffing.

He said Prichard asked him how long fingerprints could be preserved on ballot paper. Crowe said fingerprints were discussed at length.

Name On 17 Ballots

Walter G. Blackburn, the FBI handwriting ace, identified Prichard's name on 17 ballots from the Clintonville No. 3 Precinct as being penned by Funk. Prichard was an election officer at that precinct last November.

Blackburn testified that election-officer signatures on 214 of the 254 illegal ballots were written by Funk. Specimens of Funk's penmanship were obtained from papers he wrote while a law student at the University of Kentucky.

The agent also testified that Prichard did not sign any of the 254 fraudulent ballots.

The jury was dismissed for the weekend late today. The trial, which began Tuesday, will reopen Monday morning when the defense will start cross-examining Blackburn.

Funk, 27, is the son of Kentucky's attorney general, the State's fifth-ranking officer and its chief law enforcer. Prichard, 34, was a key aide to top Washington officials during the New Deal days. His father is a member of the Kentucky Legislature.

Blackburn gave a detailed, even-voiced explanation of the photographed comparisons he made of the signatures on the ballots and the writing in Funk's college papers. The jurors were supplied with copies and followed his explanations closely.

Meanwhile, the Government called an FBI fingerprint expert to testify in prosecution of the vote-fraud conspiracy. Yesterday, Bourbon County Sheriff J. M. Leer testified that Prichard helped count the votes election night but dropped out when the counters donned gloves.

The bogus ballots were detected in ballot boxes early election day. They were not counted in the final tabulation.

All 254 ballots were marked for President Truman, while 253 were "Xed" for Virgil Chapman, Democratic nominee for the United States Senate. Chapman, who lives in Bourbon County, defeated his Republican opponent, John Sherman Cooper, for the Kentucky senatorship. One of the ballots was marked for Cooper.

'Operetta,' at the Dupont, Nice, Relaxing Movie About Vienna

STUDENTS of musical history, music lovers, and just plain people can enjoy "Operetta," the new German film at the Dupont. It's a wonderfully relaxing picture which does nothing but entertain you with selections from Viennese operettas.

True, there's a plot about the famed Franz Jauner, the director-producer who brought life into the stiff, rigid, unanimated Viennese light opera form during the late half of the 1st century. His relationship with Marie Geistinger is the dramatic line around which has been hung the history of the operetta under his influence. But that part of the picture is unimportant.

When you go, if you do, go for the music of some of the Viennese greats. Let their light-hearted melodies caress your ears and lift your heart for just a little while from the troubles and anxieties of this sordid world. Believe us, it can do this very effectively, no matter what reality you must return to outside the confines of the Dupont Theater.

By way of a hint of what you'll hear, there's music from Johann Strauss (especially enchanting is "Die Fledermaus"), Franz Von Suppe, Karl Millocker, and the non-Viennese composer, Rossini. All of it is well played by Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra and engagingly sung by the Vienna State Opera Chorus.

There's little point in mentioning the principals, since they are almost unknown in America. Suffice to say they are all extremely competent as actors and singers.

If you like music, you'll like "Operetta."

Plan Studied to Combine Draft, Recruiting Office

Defense Secretary Louis Johnson said yesterday the National Military Establishment is studying the possibility of combining armed services recruiting offices and selective service boards throughout the country.

He said the suggestion was made by Senator Chan Gurney (R., S. Dak.), that since inductions have been halted, local selective service boards might be able to use recruiting offices on a part time basis for their work.

Johnson instructed the Munitions Board to study the matter.

For many of the city's pastors, the summer vacation season means preaching engagements in other cities and, in a few cases, in foreign countries.

Dr. Allan M. Frew, a native of Scotland, will be the guest speaker at Sixth Presbyterian Church, 16th and Kennedy sts. nw., at 11 a. m. Sunday. Dr. Frew was educated in the United States and has been pastor of First Presbyterian Church in Ardmore, Pa., since his graduation from Princeton Theological Seminary in 1945.

The Rev. Walter F. Hendricks, a native Washingtonian who is now rector of Grace Episcopal Church, Mohawk, N. Y., will conduct services at his church while he is away. Holy Communion at the church is at 7:30 a. m. and the morning prayer and sermon at 11 a. m.

Dr. Jacob Payton, Washington correspondent for the Christian Advocate, will preach at Albright Memorial Evangelical United Brethren Church, 4th and Rittenhouse sts. nw., at 10:45 a. m. Sunday.

Herndon's Congregationalists To Join Presbyterians Sunday

On Sunday the 49 members of 81-year-old Herndon, Va., Congregational Church will become members of the Herndon Presbyterian Church.

With them they will bring their church letters and their church property to be turned over to the Presbyterians.

Organized in 1868, the Congregational Church is the second oldest in the Virginia community. By 1887 it had a membership of 80 persons, but during the past 20 years it has had no resident pastor and membership has gradually fallen off.

On April 10 the congregation passed a resolution stating that in view of the fact that Herndon is over-churched, it believed that by joining forces with the Presbyterian Church a greater contribution to the Christian welfare of the community could be made.

The Congregationalists agreed to turn over their church, valued at nearly $30,000, to the Presbyterians.

When the proposition was presented to the Potomac Presbytery that body unanimously accepted the plan and declared that "it is a shining example of that which leading minds in the world are hoping for these days—of that which is so greatly needed, but so seldom seen in the life of the world, 'the unity of the spirit in the bond of peace'."

The Herndon Presbyterian Church, organized in 1924, has a membership of 57. Services in the future will be held in the Congregational Church, and the Presbyterian building will eventually be used as a manse. The Rev. H. Hoover Bear is pastor of the Presbyterian Church.

At the first joint service, at 11 a. m. Sunday, J. Donald Preston of the Home Mission Board of the Congregational Christian Church and the Rev. Kirk Hammond of the Potomac Presbytery will bring greetings from the two groups.

The Rev. Franklin I. Winter, who has supplied the Congregational Church for the past 10 years, will assist Mr. Bear in the communion service. W. S. Blanchard, former chairman of the Congregational Church board of trustees, will deliver the deed and the keys of the building to Mr. Bear.

Pearson to Speak

Ardath Pearson, probation officer for Southeast Washington, will speak at an open meeting of the Women's Guild of Congress Heights Presbyterian Church, Chesapeake and South Capitol sts., at 8:15 p. m. Wednesday.

Rev. Mr. Bryan Heads World Endeavor

The Rev. Ernest R. Bryan, pastor of Third Christian Church, 12th and Monroe sts. ne., last week was named president of the International Society of Christian Endeavor at the group's annual convention in Toronto, Canada.

He succeeds Dr. Daniel A. Poling, who has headed the society for many years.

Mr. Bryan, who lives at 5230 Massachusetts ave. nw., is a native of Bath, N. Y. He received his A.B. from Syracuse University and an M.A. from George Washington University and has done graduate work at New York and Harvard Universities.

Now a member of the administrative staff of the training film division of the Navy Department, he served for three years in the Naval Reserve during the war and attained the rank of lieutenant commander.

He previously was a field and educational secretary for the World Peace Foundation, assistant director of publications of the National Education Association, and a lecturer for the United States Office of Education.

He has been a writer for United States Public Health Service and before the war was chief of the division of information and publication of the National Archives.

Mr. Bryan has been at Third Church for the past 18 months, and has also spoken at many other Disciples of Christ churches in Washington. He has served as general secretary of the International Society of Christian Endeavor and editor of its publication.

Early Church Rites Prove Popular Here

By Martha J. Hall
Post Reporter

Early Sunday services, once comparatively rare among Protestant churches, are becoming increasingly popular, according to Washington pastors.

In some cases, the early services were launched to relieve crowded conditions at the traditional 11 a. m. service. The early service at these churches is often a "family service," after which parents and children go to Sunday school.

Other churches, recognizing that many members of the congregation wish to make brief trips out of the city on summer Sundays, began the services so that members could attend worship before leaving for nearby recreation areas.

Rev. Lenski Enthusiastic

The Rev. Gerhard E. Lenski, pastor of Grace Lutheran Church, 4300 16th st. nw., is particularly enthusiastic about the success of his early service. It is at 8:30 a. m. on the first Sunday of the month and at 9 a. m. on other Sundays.

Many Protestant churches, he feels, have made a mistake in limiting themselves to the 11 a. m. service. He finds a growing interest in the early service among his members all through the year and especially in the summer. The service, he said, is unusually popular with young people.

Attendance at the 9:30 a. m. service at Augustana Lutheran Church, 16th and V sts. nw., is nearly double what it was in the winter, according to a church official. Many parents attend it while their children are in church school.

Long Been a Custom

Early morning communion services have long been the custom at Episcopal churches. Both St. John's, Lafayette sq., and St. Stephen and the Incarnation, 1527 Newton st. nw., have found that attendance at early services has increased slightly in spite of the fact that many members are out of town for the summer.

Calvary Methodist Church, 1459 Columbia rd. nw., initiated an 8:45 a. m. service on June 5 and will continue it through the summer. Church members have been enthusiastic about the plan, and attendance is higher than it was last year at this time.

The Rev. Richard M. Mussen, pastor of Sherwood Presbyterian Church, 3202 22nd st. ne., has noted quite an increase in attendance at his 8 a. m. service. As the summer progresses, he expects some of the members of his church who attend the 11 a. m. service to switch to the earlier service.

2 Services at Luther Rice

Luther Rice Baptist Church, 5301 North Capitol st., has had two services throughout the year for several years, with two sessions of the Sunday school. Children, church school teachers and some parents attend the first service, while the second is largely adults. Officials expect attendance at the two services to remain about the same all summer.

Westmoreland Congregational Church, Westmoreland circle nw., last week began having a 9:30 a. m. service in place of the 8:30 a. m. and 11 a. m. services held during the winter. The double schedule will be resumed in the fall.

Sunday CHURCH EVENTS

Lowell

The Rev. C. Stanley Lowell, pastor of Wesley Methodist Church, Connecticut ave. and Jocelyn sts. nw., will speak at a young people's meeting at 6:30 p. m. at the Sidwell Friends School garden, 3901 Wisconsin ave. nw.

The outdoor meeting is one of a series on The Church In Our Modern Society sponsored by the Washington Federation of Christian Youth. Mr. Lowell will speak on "How Jesus Confronted Life in His Day" and Dan Harlan, a member of McKendree Methodist Church, will preside. In case of rain there will be no service.

Dr. Harry L. Ball, pastor of Columbia Heights Christian Church, 1435 Park rd. nw., will preach his last sermon at 10:50 a. m. Sunday before leaving for Canada for a vacation. His sermon is entitled, "A Step Forward."

"God Makes the Little Great", fourth in a series of sermons on Old Testament books, will be given by Dr. L. Ralph Tabor at 9 and 11 a. m. at Luther Place Memorial Church, Thomas Circle.

Vesper services will be conducted at the Luray, Va., Singing Tower at 7 p. m. (EST) under the auspices of the Luray Ministerial Association. Speaker will be the Rev. R. Kern Eutsler, pastor of the Luray Methodist Church.

Deaconess Day will be observed at First Baptist Church, West Washington, 27th and Dumbarton sts. nw. At 11 a. m. the Rev. T. Ewell Hopkins, pastor of the church, will speak on "The Tender Touch."

The Rev. Dr. Stanley Brown-Serman, professor of New Testament and Liturgics at the Virginia Theological Seminary, Alexandria, will preach at 11 a. m. at St. Thomas' Episcopal Church, 1772 Church st. nw. Dr. Brown-Serman, a graduate of General Theological Seminary, will also preach at St. Thomas' next Sunday.

"Good Intentions" will be the Rev. Glenn R. Coie's sermon topic at 11 a. m. at Knox Orthodox Presbyterian Church, Granville dr. and Sutherland rd., Silver Spring. At 7:30 p. m. he will speak on "The Gospel Rest."

Virginia Pastor Offers Resignation

Dr. John H. Grey, jr., pastor of the Charlottesville (Va.) Presbyterian Church for the last five years, has offered his resignation for consideration by the congregation on Sunday.

Dr. Grey, who is on vacation, gave no reason for his decision to give up the pastorate. Before coming to Charlottesville, he had held pastorates in North Carolina and Lexington and Marion, Va. He is a graduate of Davidson College, Union Theological Seminary (Richmond), Washington and Lee, and the University of Edinburgh, Scotland.

Celebration of Liturgy

The liturgy of St. John Chrysostom will be celebrated by the Rev. Vladimir Woziak according to the Byzantine-Slavonic rite Sunday at the Carmelite Fathers Chapel, 2131 Lincoln rd. ne., at 9:30 a. m.

Baptists To Convene At Va. Resort

The third annual summer assembly of the Baptist Training Union of the District of Columbia Baptist convention will be held at Shrinemont, Orkney Springs, Va., Monday through Saturday.

Baptist Youth organizations and training groups from Washington and nearby Virginia will participate in the meetings.

Dr. Paul James, pastor of Tabernacle Baptist Church, Atlanta, Ga., will be the main speaker, and the Rev. Lewis Bates, pastor of McLean Baptist Church, McLean, Va., will be the song leader.

Officers of the assembly are Kenneth Johnson, Centennial Baptist Church, director; the Rev. A. Lincoln Smith, pastor of Congress Heights Baptist Church, associate director; Miss Naomi Mo Luther Rice Baptist Church, acting secretary, and the Rev. C. Michael Warr, minister of Luther Rice, pastor advisor.

Lectures and study courses will be given by the Rev. K. O. White, pastor of Metropolitan Baptist; the Rev. Wilson Holder, pastor of Centennial Baptist; the Rev. Frank Burress, pastor of Fountain Memorial Baptist, and Miss Ann Haney, community missionary of Metropolitan Baptist.

New Charge Accepted by Mr. Beckwith

The Rev. Hubert S. Beckwith, assistant pastor of First Congregational Church, 10th and G sts. nw., since 1945, has accepted the pastorate of Rocky Hill, Conn., Congregational Church.

Beckwith

Mr. Beckwith will assume his duties at the Connecticut church, which is near Hartford, on September 1. On June 21 he will be married at First Church here to Miss Elizabeth Bushong, with the Rev. Carl Heath Kopf, minister of the church, officiating. He will leave Washington following his marriage.

A graduate of Colby College, Waterville, Me., and Andover Newton Theological Seminary, Mr. Beckwith came here following his graduation from seminary. He was minister in charge of First Church between the resignation of Dr. Howard Stone Anderson in April, 1947, and the appointment of the present pastor in November, 1947.

For three years he was adviser of the Washington Pilgrim Fellowship, and also served for several years as an assistant adviser of the Washington Federation of Christian Youth.

Mr. Beckwith will preach at First Church Sunday and again on July 16. The two sermons, based on his four years' ministry here, are entitled "An Experience of Fellowship" and "An Experience of Faith."

Annual Yule Service Set At Calvary

Members of Calvary Baptist Church, 8th and H sts. nw., will be singing Yuletide carols at services at 9 and 11:15 a. m. Sunday as the church observes its annual Christmas in July.

Launched by Dr. Clarence W. Cranford when he came here as pastor in 1942, the annual Christmas service each year is complete with Christmas decorations, anthems and gifts.

The service originally was an occasion for receiving gifts for missionaries in the foreign field, since gifts to these workers had to be prepared and mailed early.

In later years, Calvary has used the Christmas collection to raise funds to start a secondary school in Haiti under the Baptist Home Mission Board and to furnish a room at the George Washington University Hospital.

This year, it has been suggested that each member give $1 to the special collection. The funds will be used for the general missionary work of the denomination. Some of the money may also be used to help support the church's program of sending children from the community to camp for the summer.

Federal School Aid For D. C. Advocated

By Elsie Carper
Post Reporter

Boston, Mass., July 8.—The National Education Association by unanimous action here today said the District of Columbia should be included in benefits from a Federal-aid-to-education program.

The 3000 delegates to the twenty-eighth annual convention amended a resolution urging Congress to pass a Federal aid bill when it was pointed out that the District had been left out.

The resolution called for Federal funds for schools in the 48 States and the territorial possessions except the District.

Miss Angeline Anderson, teacher at Hine Junior High School and one of 15 delegates to the convention from the District, told the assembly the District also was excluded from the Federal aid bill introduced in the House of Representatives by Representative Graham Barden (D., N. C.).

She asked delegates from States having Congressmen on the House Committee on Education and Labor to urge amendment of the bill to give the District benefits. The committee now has the bill under consideration.

District school officials estimate that the District would be entitled to more than half a million dollars a year under the bill. Funds would be used to hire additional teachers to relieve classroom overcrowding.

Wire Committee Members

After convention action the Washington delegation wired members of the House committee informing them of the convention stand.

The District amendment was the only change made in the Federal aid resolution despite several attempts by delegates from New York and Rhode Island to have the convention take a stand on the controversial question of whether aid should go to parochial schools.

J. Easton Parratt, chairman of the NEA's legislative commission, pleaded with the assembly not to force the issue, declaring that any major disagreement would endanger passage of the bill.

Parratt said the NEA favored leeaving it up to the individual States to decide how the money would be spent.

The convention also passed a resolution reiterating a statement it approved Tuesday banning Communists from NEA membership. It also restated its views that Communists should not be permitted to hold teaching jobs.

Karl H. Berns, acting executive secretary of the NEA, declared the NEA will not go in for "witch hunting" to rid its ranks of any Communist members.

"We are going to assume that every teacher is entitled to NEA membership," Berns declared. "An accuser will have to show conclusive proof that a teacher is a Communist before we revoke membership."

Public Nurseries Advocated

The convention also passed a resolution urging teachers to educate youth for world understanding and declared that it was each teacher's responsibility to work by democratic procedures "to improve existing practices in school policies, such as curriculum revision, reduction of classroom size, adjustment of teacher load, opportunity for professional growth and advancement, teacher welfare, adoption of the single salary principle, tenure, sick leave and retirement benefits."

Recommended, too, was expansion of public education to include nursery schools, kindergartens, junior colleges and summer camps.

The teachers voted to set up a defense fund of at least $500,000 to fight for jobs of teachers "unjustly treated."

The convention at its final session also approved a $2,344,480 budget, the largest in NEA's 92-year history.

Dr. A. D. Holt, executive secretary of the Tennessee Education Association, was elected president to succeed Miss Mabel Studebaker. Miss Corma Mowrey, director of professional relations for the West Virginia State Education Association, was named first vice president.

Fiery River

Villagers In Canaries Flee Lava

Santa Cruz de Tenerife, Canary Islands, July 8 (U.P.).—A volcano on La Palma Island in the Canary group today erupted with terrific explosions, spilling tons of molten lava toward the sea.

Three villages in the path of the 6-foot deep, 150-yard wide fiery stream were evacuated.

The lava flow advanced almost two miles and was moving 3 feet a minute toward the southern coast.

A hundred yards from the village of Las Manchas, the flow split into two branches, temporarily sparing the village and its historic church of San Nicolas.

The villages of Los Llanos and Paso were next in the line.

Motor Trouble Halts Another Stratocruiser

New York, July 8 (AP).—A Pan-American Airways Stratocruiser returned here safely early today after engine trouble developed as the plane started on a flight to London.

The Stratocruiser, with 57 passengers aboard including former U. S. Senator Mon C. Wallgren, landed at New York International Airport, about 30 minutes after the takeoff.

Capt. C. R. Titus, the pilot, said one engine of the four-motored craft "acted a little rough," and he decided to turn back. Before returning, 1,200 gallons of gasoline was dumped into the Atlantic.

Wallgren, former Washington Governor, said there was no alarm among passengers.

[The United Press said four hours after the plane came back a 63-year-old woman passenger, totally unaware of the incident was discovered in the plane.

[Mrs. Catherine Wartnaby of Pasadena, Calif., said that shortly after boarding the plane she felt ill and went to the ladies' lounge.

["I stretched out on the couch, strapped myself in, and the plane took off. I don't know if I fainted or fell asleep, but I was out. It was about 6 a. m. when I awakened, and after loosening the straps I made myself presentable and walked into the body of the plane. There I was, all alone, with nobody around. I knocked on the window and a mechanic asked me how I got there. I told him it didn't make any difference. I simply wanted to get out."]

The plane was carrying repair engine parts for another Pan-American Stratocruiser forced to turn back early yesterday after losing a propeller on a London-to-New York flight.

Family Sees Dulles Sworn In as Senator

John Foster Dulles was sworn in as New York's second Republican Senator yesterday. The signs are that he will serve only five months.

Dulles, appointed by Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York, took the oath from Vice President Barkley.

The Senate relaxed its rules barring spectators from the cramped old Supreme Court room, where it now is meeting. This was done so Mrs. Dulles and the new Senator's sister, Mrs. Eleanor Lansing Dulles, and her son, David, could witness the ceremony.

Dulles, foreign affairs adviser to four Secretaries of State, took over the seat vacated by the resignation of Democratic Senator Robert F. Wagner.

Appointed to serve until a November 8 special election, Dulles said he expects to serve only until about December 1, when whoever is chosen in the balloting could be expected to take over.

240 High Officials Voted Raise

support of the measure, and Administration forces beat down a Republican-sponsored drive to cut sharply the proposed pay increase.

With bipartisan approval, a raise for J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, to $17,500 was voted by the House, in place of $15,000 recommended in the bill. He now gets $14,000.

Other amendments added to the $15,000 bracket Civil Aeronautics Administrator Delos Wilson Rentzel, now paid $12,000; Narcotics Commissioner Harry J. Anslinger, and Federal Crop Insurance Corporation Manager Gus F. Geissler, both now paid $10,330. Another amendment fixed a $20,000 salary for Jess Larson, Federal Administrator of General Services, and a $16,000 salary for his deputy.

Representative Edward H. Rees (R., Kan.) launched the drive to cut back the proposed increases, except for Cabinet officers, by amounts varying from $2500 to $5000. His move, strongly supported by Republicans and handful of Democrats, was defeated by a standing vote 86 to 106, and again by a teller vote, 109 to 152.

Finally just before passage, Rees moved that the bill be sent back to the committee to incorporate his plan, but lost by a 71 to 165 standing vote. The House refused to take a roll call on his motion, or on final passage.

Representative Errett P. Scrivener (R., Kans.) was defeated by a 115 to 95 vote in a move to erase from the bill a section empowering the Prfesident to set $18,000 salaries for heads of boards and commissions when they have important duties not imposed on the board members.

$20,000 for Selves Ruled Out

Points of order from both sides of the aisle were raised against the proposal of Representative Boyd Tackett (D., Ark.) to write a $20,000 salary for Congressmen into the bill, and Representative Albert Gore (D., Tenn.), in the chair, ruled out his plan.

Representative Francis E. Walter (D., Pa.) won approval for an amendment fixing a $15,000 salary for the administrative officer of United States courts, and $10,000 for his assistant. The bill had proposed $17,500 and $12,000. They now get $10,330 and $9,707.

A proposal by Representative Walt Horan (R., Wash.) to delay paying the salary boosts until July 1, 1950, was beaten by a standing vote, 141 to 94.

Agency Jobs Still in Doubt recommends restoration of this appropriation to the full budget request.

FEDERAL POWER COMMISSION: Senate group recommendation is $113,000 above the House appropriation, but $98,000 under the budget request. This means restoration of part of the 44 jobs cut out by the House.

FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION: A restoration of $189,000 was made to this appropriation, but it remains $100,000 below the budget request.

FEDERAL WORKS AGENCY: (now a branch of General Services Administration): Restoration of $25,000 of a House cut of $72,000 for the office of the administrator will mean saving of some, but probably not all, jobs of between 12 and 18 employes who would have been laid off under the House appropriation.

GENERAL ACCOUNTING OFFICE: This agency will have the same funds that it had in 1949 if Senate group restoration of $2,426,000 of a House cut is adopted; however, the appropriation would still be $1,101,000 below the budget estimate. Under the House appropriation about 1200 employes would be dropped. Senate committee also recommends appropriation of $800,000 to enable GAO to undertake a program of expenditure analysis in executive branch.

HOUSING AND HOME FINANCE AGENCY: Failure of Senate committee to restore a House cut for the office of the administrator will mean a reduction of about 12 staff members. Home Owner's Loan Corporation would have had to reduce its staff 21 per cent under the House appropriation, but the Senate committee recommends restoration of two thirds of the House cut. Under Senate recommendations the Federal Housing Administration would get back an even million dollars of the House cut, but still would receive $639,250 less than its budget estimate. Restoration of part of the House cut in appropriation for Public Housing Administration will mean saving of some of the 200 jobs cut out by the House.

INTERSTATE COMMERCE COMMISSION: Senate committee recommends restoration of three fourths of the House cut, which would have meant dismissal from the Bureau of Valuation of 40 employes. Bureau of Service and Bureau of Valuation may be able to add a few employes under the Senate appropriation.

NATIONAL ADVISORY COMMITTEE FOR AERONAUTICS: Senate committee increase would enable the committee to hire over 1000 new employes to staff newly completed research facilities and to extend present programs.

NATIONAL ARCHIVES (branch of newly created General Services Administration): Failure of Senate committee to restore House cut means reduction of some 30 members of the staff.

NATIONAL GALLERY OF ART: Senate committee recommends restoration of full amount of House cut.

SECURITIES AND EXCHANGE COMMISSION: Senate committee refused to restore House cut.

TARIFF COMMISSION: Restoration by the Senate committee of half a House cut of $150,000 means fewer discharges than the 20 to 30 necessitated by the cut.

MARITIME COMMISSION: Senate committee recommends increases in funds for maintenance of shipyard facilities, operation of warehouses and reserve fleet expense; this means heavy reduction in the administrative staff of the commission since no funds were restored to that branch.

SELECTIVE SERVICE SYSTEM: Although the Senate committee recommends doubling of the House appropriation of $4,500,000, heavy cuts will have to be made in the personnel of this agency, which requested $16,700,000. In hearings before the Senate committee General Hershey said that if no more than nine million dollars were granted, he would recommend "that we relieve our registrants of the necessity to register, of the necessity to file questionnaires, of the necessity to be classified, of the necessity to notify of every change of address, change of marital status, change of occupation."

VETERANS ADMINISTRATION: An increase of 25 million dollars over funds appropriated by the House means restoration of some 7000 jobs cut out by the House.

WHITE HOUSE OFFICE: Senate group and House both recommend full amount requested.

The Senate committee rejected a House stipulation establishing a ratio of one personnel officer for each 125 employes and substituted a directive that agencies observe ratios set by the Bureau of the Budget. This year a ratio of 1 personnel officer for every 103 employes was used as a guide by the Budget Bureau, but was relaxed in a number of cases.

Simpson Dairy Gets Contract At Glenn Dale

The Simpson-Wakefield Dairy of Washington yesterday was awarded a District contract to supply milk and other dairy products to Glenn Dale Sanitarium.

The dairy's bid, lowest of three, was $15,759.61, and is effective from July 10 through September 30.

Richfield Dairy, with a bid in excess of $16,000, was second, and Embassy, with a bid of more than $17,000, was third.

The bidding followed a Simpson-Wakefield protest on an earlier award to the Harvey Dairy Co. of Maryland.

On recommendation of District purchasing officer Roland M. Brennan and other District officials, the District Commissioners rescinded the Harvey award on June 13.

Milk for the sanitarium has been furnished by Richfield Dairy since July 1, and will continue to be supplied until Monday.

The new contract calls for the delivery of 2500 gallons of pasteurized milk, 21,000 gallons of homogenized milk, 219 gallons of 20 per cent cream, 1408 quarts of coffee cream, 119 gallons of 40 per cent cream, and 2000 quarts of buttermilk.

Nats Lose to Yanks in 12th, 4-3, on Page's Single

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

NEW YORK, July 8.—That was a bit of a bum rap handed little Mickey Haefner the other night when Clark Griffith upped and fired the pitcher off his ball club. At least the manner of Haefner's discharge, in the middle of a ball game with the Nats' owner publicly castigating him as a loafer, was rubbing it in.

There wasn't much doubt that Haefner was not alert on the play that touched off Griffith's rage. He did react leisurely to Charley Stobbs' weak infield tap toward the mound with the bases full. Whereupon Griffith walked out of the park and issued from his office the statement that "Haefner has pitched his last game for my club."

POVICH

Customarily, Haefner's kind of lapse calls for a fine at most, but he was the victim of special circumstances with the Washington club. Griffith was already fuming at the sad state of his club that had lost 22 of its previous 33 games. He wasn't giving the city a winner. All he had to offer was what he called "a hustling ball club." Haefner's lack of hustle cut him deep.

In Haefner he found a handy scapegoat that permitted Griffith to posture as an owner who could, and did say, "Our fans pay their money to see us hustle, win or lose. That's the only thing we can promise them." He liked the sound of that.

ACTUALLY, he needn't have been so harsh with Haefner. It was tantamount to using a sledgehammer to knock the fly off a baby's nose. A fine would have sufficed. In Haefner's case, he was the victim of what probably was his first lapse in the seven seasons since he joined the Washington club. Griffith was cracking down on the Washington ball player who, more than any other, had been a bear-down guy.

It was Haefner who always got the roughest pitching assignments and took them without complaint. Scarcely a series with the Cleveland club was listed when Haefner wasn't opposing Bob Feller. And more than any other Washington pitcher, he was pitted against the likes of Hal Newhouser. The smallest pitcher in the majors for most of his career, Haefner was a gutty little figure out there on the mound, seemingly able to walk erect under some of those strikes he pitched.

It was always all right with Washington fans, when the Nats' managers started Haefner. The last thing he was ever going to be accused of, they vowed, was loafing. They'd seen him in too many situations when he was seemingly pitching his heart out. Five times he lost one-run games to Bob Feller, and earlier this season in Cleveland when the Nats only gave him one run to work with he beat the Indians with a one-hitter.

BUT GRIFFITH IS in no mood to recant his decision to get rid of Haefner. When he put the pitcher on the waiver list for the third time this season, it wasn't an idle threat. Twice before when clubs claimed Haefner, Griffith withdrew waiver requests. The third time, he must go, and Griffith knew that.

The old gentleman doesn't temporize when he's in that kind of a mood. He must have known that his action damaged the sale price he could have gotten for Haefner from clubs such as Cleveland and the Red Sox who are desperate for more pitching. Griffith easily could have peddled him for $20,000. Now he is reduced to taking the $10,000 waiver price. But he says "I'll give him away, if I have to."

Venerable old baseball men like Griffith and Connie Mack develop a passion for "hustle" when they have losing ball clubs. As Griffith pointed out, it's the least he can offer his customers. Mack paralleled Griffith's action last year when he fired Pitcher Nelson Potter off his club when the pitcher returned to the bench after blowing a three-run lead. Mack accused him of loafing. "Go get your check, you're off the club," he exploded.

GRIFFITH SIMILARLY was willing to pocket any financial losses when he was out of patience with Second Baseman Gerry Priddy a couple of years ago. Irate at reports that Priddy was leading a club revolt against Manager Ossie Bluege, Griffith sold him to the Browns for $25,000 "to get him off my ball club." A small bit of shopping around, would have fetched $75,000 from the Tigers for Priddy. They offered the Browns $200,000 for him last winter. But Griff, in his moods, gets downright impractical.

Griffith came into possession of a ball player under somewhat similar circumstances many years back. He was managing the New York Yankees and thinking he could win the 1904 pennant if he had another hard-hitting outfielder. He tried in vain to talk Jimmy McAleer, manager of the Browns, out of big John Anderson. McAleer wouldn't sell.

But a few days later when Griffith's Yankees were playing the Browns in St. Louis, Anderson, unhappily for the Browns, tried to steal third base with the bases full. The attempt wound up in a triple play by the Yankees. McAleer reacted quickly. From the third base coaching lines, he shouted to Griffith: "The deal's on. You've got Anderson."

Bosox Whip Macks, 7 to 1; Stephens Hits No. 20

Boston, July 8 (AP).—Vern Stephens clouted his twentieth homer of the season as the rebounding Red Sox overcame the Philadelphia Athletics, 7-1, for their fourth straight victory tonight before a packed 34,276 crowd.

The Red Sox collected seven other hits, including a two-run double by Ted Williams, and eight bases on balls off three Philadelphia flingers.

Starter Dick Fowler dug his own hole in the third inning after rival Pitcher Joe Dobson singled with one out. Dom DiMaggio banged an easy double-play ball at Fowler but that towering righthander made the throw to first base.

Thereupon Johnny Pesky singled and he and Dobson scored on Williams' two-base drive into the wide open spaces the shift for that slugger leaves in left field. Stephen followed with his four-bagger that boosted his runs batted in total to 83.

Dobson gave a dull effort, yielding six hits and seven bases on balls. But three snappy double plays, one with the bases loaded, enabled him to coast to his sixth win against eight setbacks.

McDonald Reports His Car Stolen

Sportscaster Arch McDonald reported his car stolen last night while he was broadcasting the Nats-New York game over radio station WWDC.

Arch left the game broadcast early to switch over to WTOP for his regular 11:15 sports show and discovered the loss. He had parked the car, a 1948 Plymouth sedan, in a lot near the studio.

Dark Hit on Head, Taken to Hospital

Philadelphia, July 8 (AP).—Alvin Dark, Boston Braves shortstop was hit on the head by a ball thrown by Gran Hammer in the thirteenth inning of tonight's Braves-Phillies game and carried off the field on a stretcher and rushed to a hospital.

A spokesman at Temple University Hospital said Dark has regained consciousness and his condition is not believed serious.

Loop Rules Prevent Griffith Asking Waivers on Haefner

New York, July 8.—The major league rules are temporarily frustrating Clark Griffith's attempt to move Pitcher Mickey Haefner off his Washington club.

The Nats' owner, wrathful at Haefner for what he called "indifferent performance" against the Red Sox Thursday night, finds himself unable to ask waivers on the pitcher at this time.

Because Haefner's name was on the Nats' waiver list last June 20, Griffith is forbidden by the rules to post it again until July 20, after the required lapse of a month.

Meanwhile, Haefner will sit it out and draw his pay from the Washington club in idleness unless Griffith mellows and retains him.

Today, Griffith reiterated, however, his intention to get rid of the little southpaw. There was some indication, that the club owner might change his mind when he said, "I'm not happy about having to deal with Haefner this way."—POVICH.

Dodgers Whip Giants, 4-3, Beating Hartung for 1st Time

Brooklyn, July 8 (AP).—Brooklyn protected its National League lead tonight by nosing out the New York Giants, 4-3, defeating Clint Hartung for the first time in his four starts against them.

Pee Wee Reese's triple and Duke Snider's long fly broke a 3-3 tie in the sixth inning before 34,468, largest Ebbets Field night crowd of the season.

The Brooks used three strong-armed pitchers to subdue the Giants. Don Newcombe pitched four scoreless innings but blew a three-run lead in the fifth with two out. Rex Barney, the eventual winner, quieted that rally and pitched one-hit ball until the eighth.

After walking the first two batters in the eighth, Barney was replaced by Erv Palica, who retired six straight men to protect the team.

The Dodgers scored off Hartung in the second when Jackie Robinson walked, went to third when a pick-off throw hit him for an error and scored on an infield out. In the fourth the Brooks scored two more on Hartung on Gene Hermanski's single, Snider's triple and Gild Hodges' single.

Harold Abbe Laurel Winner

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

Harold Abbe, longest shot in the five-horse field, upset the best pacers on the grounds at Laurel Raceway last night and paid $20.60 win mutuel in the featured $1000 event. A total of $319,046 was wagered on the eight-race card.

It represented a new Maryland high for the season and nearly approached the $336,000 bet on the closing night last year at Laurel.

Things were so good, in fact that the track finally announced an official attendance figure—8595.

Hal Harden, owner of Harold Abbe, drove him to victory in one of the most thrilling races staged in the Free State, in 2:07 2-5. The time didn't approach the track record but the horses were bunched all the way and the top crowd of the meeting had plenty to scream about.

Bonnie's Jr., second choice, broke at the start, but came on to make it a five-horse race. Principal boos were directed at Marion Direct, Paul Vineyard's 6-5 choice, who was nosed out by Bonnie's Jr. for the fourth spot.

It wasn't only the track that made money last night. Nineteen fortunate bettors collected $614 when two aged trotters stepped lively in the daily double.

Pat Hubbard's 15-year-old Bob Burns, named when the bazooka played its most blatant tune, took the first; Betty Curry, 13-year-old brown mare, won the second race.

Longden Denies Part in Alleged Fix

Los Angeles, July 8 (AP).—Jockey Johnny Longden returned from a fishing jaunt to Ensenada, Mex., today in time to deny in Superior Court he had any part in an alleged race-fixing deal February 15, 1947.

He was supposed to testify yesterday, but explained his absence was unintentional.

Longden was called as a prosecution witness against Lloyd Arthur Hargis. Mrs. Mary Lewis, 72, claims Hargis induced her to give him $2500 so he could "fix" a race at Santa Anita. She said Hargis told her he had bet on Stepfather, a horse ridden by Longden and which was disqualified, and that she had lost her investment.

Grays Host To Tigers Sunday

The Washington Homestead Grays, first-half champions of the Negro American Association, resume activities Sunday facing the Raleigh Tigers in a doubleheader at Griffith Stadium.

The Grays, winners in 22 of 24 games and 11 in a row, will be meeting another good club in the Tigers, winners in 9 of their last 11 games.

Cleveland Outlasts Browns, 6-5

St. Louis, July 8 (AP).—The Cleveland Indians staved off two late rallies by the St. Louis Browns tonight to win, 6 to 5, and register their eighth victory in their last 10 games. A two-run homer by Larry Doby in the first inning supplied the margin of victory.

The last place Browns out-hit the world champions, but four double plays reduced their scoring opportunities.

Early Wynn was given a six-run lead and he blanked the Browns until the seventh when pinch batter Stan Spence doubled home two runs. After Bob Dillinger singled Spence in, Gene Bearden took over, but he too was routed in the eighth. The veteran Al Benton finally got the Browns under control.

Bob Swift's second homer was the only run Pierce allowed his former teammates in gaining his third victory.

Bradshaw, Locke Tie; Playoff Today

By Bill Macklin

Sandwich, England, July 8 (AP).—Bobby Locke of South Africa, and Harry Bradshaw of Ireland came back from oblivion today to tie for the British Open golf championship with record-equalling scores of 283. They meet in a 36-hole playoff tomorrow.

Five strokes off the pace in a sever-way deadlock for twelfth position as the field entered the last half of the 72-hole classic this morning, they shot identical totals of 68 and 70 in a dramatic windup on the sandy, windswept royal St. George's course.

Frank Stranahan of Toledo, Ohio, captured the silver medal for finishing as the low amateur with 71-73-74-72—290.

The only other American in the field of 31 still firing today—Professional Johnny Bulla of Phoenix, Ariz., and Pittsburgh, Pa.—faded out and wound up with 71-73-76-79—299 in the race for the title vacated by Henry Cotton.

It was the first two-way finish in the open championship since American professionals Denny Shute and Craig Wood played to a dead heat in 1933 at St. Andrew's. Since its inauguration in 1860, the championship has produced only five other ties.

Roberto de Vicenzo of Argentina, who posted a 72-hole score of 68-75-73-69—285, was third.

England's hopefuls also wilted before the sharpshooting of the visitors from overseas. British Ryder Cupper Sam King, who led by two strokes after 36 holes, shot 74 and 72 today for a 286.

That left King in a fourth place tie with Charlie Ward, who entered the final round only a stroke off the pace but finished with a 70 and a 72.

Another British Ryder Cup star to falter was Max Faulkner. He had a string of 71s that tied him with Locke and Bradshaw for the lead at the three-quarter post, but ended with a 74 for 287.

Bradshaw, a 35-year-old professional at Kilcroney, 14 miles from Dublin, barely missed winning the championship and breaking the record when a 20-foot putt on the final green hung at the lip of the cup.

Klamath River Too Much for Daredevil Boats

Yreka, Calif., July 8 (AP).—The race of the daredevils for $1000 turned into a solo venture today.

Six boats were to have started a 176-mile outboard motor race down the swirling rapids of the Klamath River. No boat has ever made the trip. Only two were on the starting line today.

One of those ran into trouble 1½ miles from the start. The driver patched the hole in the bottom of the boat, and started in again. Then, in succession, six more holes had to be patched. Finally the entire bottom was ripped out by the rocks, and the boat was taken from the river.

DiMaggio Ties It With Hit in 9th; Harris Loser

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

New York, July 8.—The Yankees paged Joe Page at the end of eight innings tonight, and in the twelfth he delivered them a 4-3 victory over the earnest but punchless Nats.

It was a personal triumph for Page after Joe DiMaggio rescued the Yankees from defeat with a game-tying single in the ninth off Mickey Harris.

Page threw four scoreless innings at the Nats and then broke up the game with a hit off his own bat. The hulking relief southpaw dribbled a single through the close-drawn infield to send Bill Johnson and 35,845 Yankee fans home quite happy.

Nats Set Mickey Down

It was a valiant but futile bid by Harris to pitch the Nats to victory in the 3-hour and 15-minute marathon in the park where they have won only 3 of their last 26 Yankee Stadium starts. He went all he way, and pitched 6-hit ball until the doleful ninth.

After giving him three runs, the Nats abandoned Harris in the last eight innings. In fact, after the fourth, they were held to two hits by a trio of Yankee pitchers, Clarence Marshall, Frank Shea and the aforementioned Page.

Bill Johnson opened the twelfth auspiciously for the Yanks with a smashing single off Yost's glove, and it was the first of three Yankee hits that didn't get out of the infield. Gene Woodling laid down a bunt, and the over-eager Harris overran it, with both runners safe.

Page Crosses 'Em Up

George Stirnweiss moved them to third and second with a half-chop rap to Eddie Robinson for the first out, and then Page called it a night for everybody. With the Nats' infield playing close, Page hit a soft rap that Dente could barely knock down at second base, and Johnson trotted home.

Harris had a 3-2 lead going for him in the ninth, when he lapsed to the extent of issuing Rizzuto his second pass of the game. Bauer's sacrifice moved Rizzuto up, and then it was that DiMaggio, hitless to that point, belted a hot single to left that was loaded with the tying run.

In the tenth, Harris was also inviting disaster when he walked Lindell and Woodling with none out, but he bore down superbly to fan Page at that point and get rid of Coleman and Rizzuto on fly balls.

The Nats were threatening to get a run for themselves in the twelfth when Mele and Vollmer drew walks from Page with none out, but that favorable situation deteriorated rapidly as Page pitched himself out of danger. Robinson, attempting to bunt, lined a ball into Stirnweiss' glove, and Page disposed of Yost and Dente on fly balls.

Nats Score 2 in Second

Rookie Marshall helped set the Nats up in a 2-0 lead in the second inning with his wildness. He hit Robinson with a pitched ball and then threw a single to Yost. Then he wild-pitched the pair up a base. One run scored on Jake Early's infield out, and Sherry Robertson fetched in the other with a single to center.

The Yanks got one run back in the third after Lindell walked. Stirnweiss lashed a double into the left field corner to score him all the way from third.

In the fourth, Dente and Early

Pirates Win 7th In Row, 2-1, Over Cubs

Pittsburgh, July 8 (AP). — The Pittsburgh Pirates stretched their winning streak to seven straight tonight as they defeated the Chicago Cubs, 2-1, before a packed house of 36,366. Vic Lombardi went the route, scattering six hits. The only Cub run was the result of Roy Smalley's homer.

Lombardi gave up two singles in the ninth after two were out but got pinchhitter Emil Verban for the final out on an infield fly.

Lombardi drove in what proved to be the winning run in the fifth with a looping single. In the top half of the inning, the Cubs' only marker came as Smalley hit his circuit smash into the left field bull pen. Dutch Leonard, who was charged with his eleventh loss against two defeats, went the route for the Cubs.

led off with singles that culminated in a run. Dente scored from third while Marshall was engaged in throwing out harris.

That was the last run the Nats ever did get. Stewart singled in the fifth and Mele doubled in the ninth, and you might say the nats were playing two-hit ball after the fourth inning.

IN SHORT. . . the Yankees put their golfers on parade for eight o'clock fans before the game. Using eight-irons at home plate, they aimed for a marked-off target in centerfield. Coach Bill Dickey won the contest with a near bulls-eye, bettering Tommy Byrne's second-best shot . . . Ed Stewart stole second in the opening inning, and so could your Aunt Kate, With the help of Yogi Berra's kind of throw, high, wide and unhandsome . . . Jack Early is moving into the No. 1 catching job with the Nats for a couple of reasons (1) He has the best throwing arm and (2) the Nats need his kind of hoorah . . . Before the Nats leave for the West after the All-Star game, they will call in a pitcher from their Chattanooga club, but his name won't be Buck Newsom despite the fact that Early reports that Newsom has come up with a sure-fire knuckle ball.

Sam Dente made his best catch of the night in the fourth inning—while he was at bat. Floundering out of the way of an inside pitch, his bat slipped high in the air as he fell. Dente, while prone, made a superb catch of the blunt instrument to save himself from being conked on the head. . . . Ed Stewart retired at the end of seven innings after a foul off his own bat banged and bruised his right ankle.

3-Year-Old Just Lasts, Pays $10.20

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Charles Town, W. Va., July 8.—C. P. Brockdorff's Tufton, a failure in big-time racing for two years, found a field he could whip here today. The son of Canter, operating in a group of eight 3-year-olds, led virtually all the way and lasted to take first money by a half-length margin.

R. J. Randolph's Tyndareus was second and four lengths in advance of E. C. Gott, jr.'s Good Timer, the last named the favorite in the test labeled The Leesburg, the best offering on an all-claiming program.

Jockey Emory Scott, of Baltimore, broke Tufton alertly and had him in front before the field had gone a furlong. By various margins up to five lengths, Tufton set the pace. Tyndareus, allowed to settle into stride, saved ground and came on gamely to loom menacingly in the stretch.

Scott then went to the whip on Tufton and the Canter gelding responded. Tyndareus hung in the final strides under Apprentice Johnny Regalbuto's urging. Good Timer made a bid at the far turn, but weakened gradually thereafter despite pressure being applied.

Tufton was third choice in the betting and returned a $10.20 win mutuel. He ran the 1 1/16 miles in 1:51 over a track termed "good" after being slow for the earlier portions of the program as the result of rain last night.

Stewards announced today that Co-ed, owned by E. G. Hoffman, has been barred from racing in West Virginia until further notice due to inconsistent racing. Co-ed winner on yesterday's program, had been showing good and dull form in alternate races.

Welch Beats Johnsen to Reach Finals

By Jules Loh

Top-seeded Barney Welsh won a berth in today's finals of the D. C. men's singles tennis championships by downing Davey Johnsen in straight sets, 6—1, 6—4 yesterday at Columbia Country Club.

Welsh had his younger opponent completely at his mercy with his dynamic first serve, with which he registered five aces, two of them in succession.

Johnsen dropped the first five games of the match to the lanky veteran and then capitalized on deft dropshots to avoid being shut out in the first set.

Practically the entire match was played from back-court. However, Welsh rushed the net twice to put away volleys for two game points. Johnsen was ahead in games only once. He won the fourth game in the second set to tie the score at two all, then took the fifth game and a 3-2 lead.

In the other semifinal singles, Jim Thackara defeated Don Leavens, 6—2, 1—6, 6—3, and then teamed up with his victim to finish off Bill Gifford and Freddie McNair in the doubles quarterfinals, 6—4, 5—7, 6—4.

Alphonso Smith and Nick Powell dropped their quarterfinal match to the second-seeded team of Hugh Lynch and Barney Welsh, 6—4, 6—4. Smith saved match point for the losers twice but was powerless as Welsh smashed a blistering overhead out of the court for the winners.

YESTERDAY'S RESULTS
Singles—Welsh defeated Johnsen, 6—1, 6—4; Thackara defeated Leavens, 6—2, 1—6, 6—3.
Doubles—Welsh-Lynch defeated Powell-Smith, 6—4, 6—4; Thackara-Leavens defeated Gifford-McNair, 6—4, 5—7, 6—4.
TODAY'S PAIRINGS
Singles Finals, 2:30 — Thackara vs. Welsh.
Doubles, 5:00—Bogley-Squires vs. Thackara-Leavens.

In Alexandria Bicentennial

Wilson, Gardner's Best Ball Of 63 Tops Qualifying Round

In what promised to be a preview of the final match in the Alexandria bicentennial four-ball championship at Belle Haven Country, the top teams of Bobby Brownell and Ralph Bogart of Chevy Chase and Jim Gardner, Washington, and Col. Jim Wilson, Army-Navy, played the qualifying round together yesterday.

Wilson and Gardner toured the 6300-yard course with a best ball of 63, while Bogart and Brownell needed 64 strokes. None of the other qualifiers could do better than 67.

Wilson confounded the Belle Havenites by driving onto the green on the par-4 eighth hole. The hole is a 225-yard dogleg with the green invisible from the tee. Wilson asked his caddie, "Which tree should I drive over?"

After being shown, he slammed his drive over and it dropped 30 feet from the pin. Wilson missed his first putt but easily got a birdie three.

The first and second round matches will be played today in two flights of sixteen. There will be a consolation round for the early losers and the semifinals and finals will be held Sunday.

Luciano Tries Conversation On Rome Cops

Rome, July 8 (AP).—Charles (Lucky) Luciano, former New York vice king who swears he's going straight, sought today to talk his way out of jail and more trouble.

Police in Rome's "Sing Sing," questioned the dapper former racketeer in connection with a purported narcotic smuggling plot financed from New York.

Police said so far no evidence had been found to link Luciano with the case.

Earlier, Italian authorities said Luciano would be exiled to his old home town in Sicily, Lercara Friddi, regardless of the outcome of the inquiry, "because his presence in Rome is a crime threat."

Tonight, however, Oreste Barrancos, chief of the police mobile squad, said Luciano's deportation to Sicily is "not yet certain."

Barrancos said Ralph Liguori, 43, a reputed former New York underworld figure and friend of Luciano, also had been detained for questioning.

Luciano, now 51, said he did not know Charles Vincent Trupia of New York, arrested June 25 at Rome's airport with $500,000 in cocaine.

An American police official, said Trupia is suspected of belonging to a dope smuggling ring "financed by a New York East Side mob."

(In New York, Garland H. Williams, district supervisor of the Federal Bureau of Narcotics, said "the import of the case makes it inadvisable to give out any information." He said American and Italian authorities were working in the closest coordination.") ods and provides for temporary continuance of the Government's mortgage-insurance program.

Luciano's girl friend, Igea Lissoni, 28, said: "I'll wait for Charley. I'm sure they'll find nothing wrong."

When the conference report came to the House floor yesterday its opponents, who had come within five votes of knocking out the public housing feature, threw in the sponge. The measure was approved by voice vote within an hour after the House convened.

Three quarters of an hour later the Senate, also by voice vote, completed congressional action and sent the legislation to the White House.

The act is almost identical with the original bipartisan Senate version which first passed the upper chamber.

Under the public housing section, the Federal Government is authorized to spend up to 308 million dollars a year for the next 40 years to pay the difference between operating costs of low-rent public housing and income from rentals.

Housing officials have estimated that the Government actually can expect to pay out about 230 million dollars a year for some 33 years.

The slum clearance section permits the Government to lend up to a billion dollars at any one time to finance buying and clearing of slum properties.

The District of Columbia is included in the measure, but land purchased for redevelopment must be within the borders of the District and not in adjacent States.

GOP Unit Names Summerfield to Replace Scott

The Republican National Strategy Committee yesterday named Arthur Summerfield, Michigan national committeeman, as its executive chairman.

Summerfield replaces National GOP Chairman Hugh D. Scott, jr., who withdrew as chairman of the group after Tom Coleman of Wisconsin, its vice chairman, resigned with the complaint that the committee had not done any work.

As new head of the group, Summerfield will be in charge of a program to get local, State and national Republican organizations working together in the 1950 election campaign.

RFC Halts Purchase of Housing Loans

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation has called a temporary halt to purchase of FHA and GI housing loans by its subsidiary agency, Federal National Mortgage Association.

Field officials were notified to discontinue purchases on July 6, a FNMA official here said yesterday. He explained that the association has reached its limit of nearly a billion dollars to buy the loans.

Legislation to increase the authorization limit to about $1,500,000,000 was passed by the Senate on a voice vote late yesterday.

A similar bill will be considered by the House Banking and Currency Committee on Monday. As soon as the legislation is approved, FNMA can resume its purchases.

FHA and GI housing loans are made by banks and private mortgage organizations. FNMA buys mortages from banking institutions providing them with additional funds to loan to home-owners for home purchases.

Because of the volume of construction during the past weeks, FNMA has purchased up to its authorized limit.

Officials at FNMA and private mortgage organizations agree that at the present time the halt in buying is only an inconvenience, and expect that it will be relieved as soon as congressional action is taken. The situation could become serious, they said, only if the Congress fails to increase the authorization during its present session.

Tests to Fix Slaying Scene

the right bank to Smith's Point at its mouth. Except for slight changes in 1927, the boundary has followed the 1877 "Award."

Some of the white buoys that have traditionally marked the Maryland-Virginia boundary line in this area, the lower Chesapeake Bay, have disappeared this year, having become waterlogged or having been washed away by winter ice, according to a Maryland Fisheries authority.

It was somewhere near the eastern leg of the boundary near Fox Island that Nelson was shot by Acree.

Acree is being held in the Accomack County (Va.) lockup charged with murder, awaiting outcome of the jurisdictional tug-of-war. He gave himself up on a Virginia warrant. Virginia authorities refused to arrest him on a Maryland warrant.

Colonna at Liberty

E. Almer Ames, jr., Accomack County Commonwealth's attorney, said he would take no legal steps against Acree until results of the joint survey are in.

Presumably, Virginia also would turn George Colonna, jr., another enforcement officer, over to Maryland should the survey show Nelson was shot in Maryland waters.

Colonna is charged in a Maryland warrant with being an accessory to the shooting, but has not been charged with any crime by Virginia and still is at liberty.

Meanwhile, in Crisfield, Md., embittered fisherfolk yesterday gave Nelson one of the biggest funerals in the small crabbing center's history.

The flower-banked Church of God couldn't hold all the people who came to pay last respects to the former policeman, a widower with six children.

Most Somerset County watermen remained away from their boats and changed into their best clothes to attend the funeral.

Wife Died Three Months Ago

Nelson himself had walked down the aisle of the little church just three months and four days ago for a last look at his wife. She died of pneumonia.

Among the townsmen there was strong resentment. If "Pete" Nelson had been crabbing in Virginia waters, how could he have known, they asked. The boundary line is jagged, and as one man said:

"How can you tell when you're in Maryland or Virginia—can you tell a Virginia crab from a Maryland crab?"

Anger was expressed also by Virginians themselves.

In Norfolk, the local chapter of the Izaak Walton League wrote Governor Tuck a long letter protesting the shooting of Nelson and attacking the Virginia Fisheries Commission for "selfish and suicidal policies."

"Always in the past," the letter stated, "the Commission of Fisheries has apparently been entirely under the influence of commercial fishing interests.

"Selfish and Suicidal"

"The prevailing doctrine seems to have been to jealously guard the territorial water of Virginia against instrusion: to grab every dollar which can be taken from fisheries today without regard to the future . . . and refuse all efforts at cooperation suggested by our sister State of Maryland."

"In our opinion our present Virginia policies are selfish and suicidal."

Another bitter note was sounded by Deputy Sheriff Woodland Jackson of Somerset County (Md.), who charged that he'd gotten "the runaround" from Virginia authorities when he tried in vain to serve Maryland warrants on Acree and Colonna.

Youth Faces Murder Charge In Hanging

Chicago, July 8 (AP).—The leader of the "hangmen's noose gang" changed his story again today, police said, and told of hanging a 3-year-old boy during an argument over a hammer.

State's Attorney John S. Boyle who previously doubted Robert Munday's original story that the killing of Tommy Laux was an accident said "we will indict the boy for murder as soon as we clean up details."

The prosecutor said Robert, a 15-year-old eighth grader in a disciplinary school, declared he "was angry with Tommy because he kept after me to join the hangman's noose club. . . Thursday night, I helped him up on a couch, put this heavy noose around his neck and asked him where he took my hammer. He didn't answer and then I knocked Tommy off the couch. He hung there for 10 or 15 minutes."

Yesterday Robert said Tommy accidentally hanged himself during an initiation. Earlier Robert's 13-year-old brother, Charles, gave a statement that he killed Tommy.

Big Attendance Saves Program At Nolte Park

Because of a sudden increase yesterday in attendance at the Nolte Park Recreation Center, Silver Spring, Md., the summer program will not be terminated, Blair H. Smith, recreation director of the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission, said last night.

Smith had announced Thursday that unless there was a substantial increase in neighborhod participation, the center would be closed yesterday. The attendance yesterday jumped to 45. Prior to that the daily average was 20. If the attendance stays at 40 another instructor must be added, Smith said.

Located at the end of Mansfield rd., off Dale Drive, the center is one of 29 sponsored by the commission.

Roseberry Hearing Is Postponed

Manassas, Va., July 8 (Spl.).—Preliminary hearing for John Y. Roseberry on charges of embezzling $19,601 from the Prince William Electric Cooperative while he was its manager, was continued today until July 22.

Trial Justice C. Lacey Compton granted the continuance and a defense request for a bill of particulars detailing the charges. Roseberry is free under $7500 bond.

Six warrants charge Roseberry with taking co-op funds at various periods ranging back to June, 1944. If convicted, he would face a maximum prison sentence of 10 years on each count.

County officials would not disclose how the shortages were discovered or how the evidence was gathered against the 35-year-old member of a prominent Manassas family. Electrification Administration, from which the co-op borrows capital, has been examining its books.

Roseberry had been manager of the co-op since it was organized in 1941 and had been an engineer with its predecessor, the Bull Run Power Co., since 1933. Associates said he was the driving force in building the co-op

Tappahannock Slaying Trial Nearing End

Tappahannock, Va., July 8 (AP).—Counsel today began summation in the case of David J. McGalliard, 28, charged with the shotgun slaying of his sister and her husband.

The State charges McGalliard shot Helen and Frank Spindle to death in the couple's apartment over a small auto shop in Loretto, Va. Their bodies were found March 11.

McGalliard is on trial in Essex County Circuit Court.

Emory L. Carlton, Commonwealth's Attorney directing the prosecution, concluded his argument at 6:30 p. m. and Judge E. Hugh Smith recessed the court until 10 a. m. Saturday.

Then the defense attorneys, Dabney Overton and Marsten Smith, will make their addresses to the jury and D. Nelson Sutton, special counsel for the Commonwealth, will close the argument for the State.

The State is asking the death penalty on the contention that McGalliard killed his siser and brother-in-law in the commission of a robbery.

He admitted on the stand to taking about $100 in cash, two wrist watches, two shotguns, a radio and several articles of clothing from the Spindle apartment after the couple was killed. He asserted they were shot accidentally during a scuffle for a shotgun.

Senate Group Votes Funds For GAO And Court

Measure Provides 5 Million Each, Same as the Sums House Approved

Five million dollars each for construction of the new Federal Courts and General Accounting Office Buildings here have been approved by the Senate Appropriations Committee.

These amounts, same as House-approved figures, were sent to the Senate floor yesterday as part of the big $7,636,006,873 Independent Offices appropriation bill.

Master Plan Included

The Federal Courts Building, to house the District and Appeals Courts here, is to be built at 3d and Constitution ave. nw. The General Acounting Office Building site is at 5th and G sts. nw.

The bill includes also $50,000 for the National Capital Park and Planning Commission to prepare a master plan for slum clearance in the District to be submitted to congressional appropriations committees by next May 1.

Housing Body Gets More

This amount was all that remained of requests for large-scale appropriations to begin actual slum clearance in Washington. The proposals ranged from about two million for redeveloping Marshall Heights to 20 million for fully implementing the 1946 District slum clearance and redevelopment law.

The bill included also $34,000 for the National Capital Housing Authority, $3490 more than the House allowed, and $29,000 for Planning Commission personnel, compared with $25,000 granted by the House.

Jerry Klutz, who writes The Federal Diary, is on vacation. Publication of the column will be resumed when he returns.

Jail Suicide Held Mystery By Warden

Baltimore, July 8 (AP).—Maryland penitentiary officials were trying to determine today where Roy Arnold Wood got the razor blade he used to kill himself in his death cell last night.

The 23-year-old bricklayer, condemned to die for killing Patrolman Joseph Benedict, committed suicide by slashing his jugular vein about two hours before he was to be hanged.

Warden Edwin T. Swenson said Wood left three suicide notes. And in one he named "someone" in the prison who gave him the razor blade.

The warden declined to identify the person named, pending an investigation by the State's attorney.

Swenson also revealed that Wood had gotten hold of two other pieces of metal which he stuffed in the lock of his cell door, presumably to forestall aid reaching him in time to save his life.

His hanging was scheduled to be the first part of a double execution.

Howard C. Fram, Kensington, Md., baker convicted of slaying an elderly Baltimore grocer just before Christmas in 1947, was in an adjoining death house cell.

Dazed by the furor of Wood's suicide, Fram was led to the gallows a few minutes late and was pronounced dead at 12:42 a. m.

6. New antibiotics now readily available cure Rocky Mountain spotted fever. The cure rates of aureomycin and chloromycetin have to all reports completely licked this once-dread disease transmitted to humans by infected ticks. But prevention is still best, physicians say, pointing out that both drugs are expensive and take from one to four days or longer to relieve the suffering.

Lane Boasts Of Schools And Hospitals

Maryland 'Living Within Its Means,' Governor Asserts

Baltimore, July 8 (Spl.).—Governor Lane in a radio report tonight cited Maryland's accomplishments in school, road and hospital construction.

Despite the heavy expenditures, he said, the Maryland government "is living within its means," on a "solid and sound financial basis."

Chief accomplishments he cited were these:

1. Schools: Since the State's current school construction program was enacted by the 1947 General Assembly, 23 new schools have been completed, another 23 are under construction, and 75 others are expected to be started between now and July 1, 1950.

Tells of Additions

A total of 140 additions to existing schools also will be built or under construction by July, 1950, he said, and the State, by that date, will have spent 101 million dollars under its 3½-year school building program.

2. Roads. By the end of this year, Maryland will have built since January, 1947, reconstructed, or have under construction nearly 900 miles of highways, making the total highway expenditure by that time approximately 90 million dollars.

3. Hospitals. Lane said plans for new mental hospitals are "on the drawing boards" at present, while contracts for housing for employes of the Crownsville State Hospital have been let.

No Noise Heard, Witness Testifies In Rape Case

In Arlington County Court yesterday, a witness testified he heard no disturbance in an adjoining apartment where Charles H. Tapp, 19, is accused of having raped a 25-year-old woman on July 2.

The woman told police Tapp raped her in his apartment at 1302 Lee hwy. after he picked her up in a Washington drug store. Yesterday's witness, the Rev. Charles W. Miller, 83, a Primitive Baptist minister who lives next door to Tapp, said he heard nothing unusual while the alleged rape was taking place.

Man, 63, Answers Slaying Charge Of 13 Years Ago

A 63-year-old man appeared yesterday in District Court to answer for a first-degree murder he is accused of committing in 1936.

He is Russell Moss, who then resided at 1323 Half st. sw. Indicted 13 years ago on a charge of slashing the throat of a 15-year-old girl in the house where they both lived, he was shortly thereafter found to be of unsound mind suffering from alcoholic deterioration. He was released last week from St. Elizabeths Hospital here.

He stated in court yesterday that he wishes his former attorney, Thomas E. Lodge, to represent him again. It was indicated that an inquiry would be made into Moss' mental condition at the time of the offense, before a trial will be scheduled.

5 Identify Youth as Purse Thief

All-Women Victims Say Snatchings Took Place Here During Past Month

Five purse-snatching victims last night identified a 20-year-old youth in a police line-up as the man who either reached or leaped from an automobile to grab their purses.

The victims, all women, said the purse-snatchings all occurred during the past month as they waited for buses or were walking along Washington streets.

The youth, Walter I. Donning, 1826 8th st. nw., was arrested by Prince Georges County police in Riverdale, Md., while riding in a car with two girl companions.

Prince Georges police said the car had been reported as stolen.

Turned Over to D. C. Police

He was turned over to District police who called in the purse-snatching victims. He was charged with five counts of larceny, after the five victims had identified him.

Mrs. Lester D. Hammond, 60, of 3028 Porter st. nw., whose husband is a chemist with the Bureau of Standards, identified him as the man whose hand reached from a passing automobile earlier yesterday grabbed her purse containing $3 as she waited for a bus near her home.

Mrs. Francis Deremer, 1429 Webster st. nw., identified him as the man who leaped from a car and took her purse containing $41, also earlier yesterday, as she walked on Michigan ave. nw.

Took Purse With $100

Mrs. Virginius Dabney, widow of Dr. Virginius Dabney, 6 Woodhaven blvd., Bethesda, told police he jumped from a car in the 1800 block of 23d st. nw., on June 13, and made off with her purse containing $100. Her nephew is Virginius Dabney, editor of the Richmond Times-Despatch.

Mrs. Vera G. Clark, 4628 Windom pl. nw., tabbed him as the man who jumped from an auto and stole her purse containing $30—also on June 13, and Mrs. Ruby Manning, 2953 Ontario ave. nw., said he grabbed from her purse $60 in a similar manner on July 1.

Donning admitted all of the snatches except that of Mrs. Manning's purse, police said. Police said they were also seeking Donning's companion who did the driving during the purse-snatchings. Police said they know the companion's identity.

School Offer Rejected by Falls Church

The Falls Church School Board last night unanimously directed City Attorney LaRue Van Meter to take its fight for control of three schools within the city back to Fairfax Circuit Court.

The board cited the Fairfax School Board's recent refusal to turn over the Oak Street Elementary School and the Falls Church High School to it.

Fairfax Circuit Court Judge C. G. Quesenbery had ruled June 3 that the City of Falls Church, which was created last August 16, had a right to control its own school system.

The judge ordered Falls Church and Fairfax County school officials to begin negotiations over financial terms of the school transfer, but directed the parties to return to court if they couldn't agree on terms.

Van Meter said terms of an audit of Falls Church-Fairfax County affairs had been agreed upon earlier yesterday with Fairfax officials. The audit will be supervised by State Auditor J. Gordon Bennett.

Identity Sought Of Man Drowned In C. & O. Canal

District police last night were seeking to identify the body of a man found in the C. & O. Canal, west of Key Bridge yesterday.

The body was described as that of a Negro about 47 years old, weight about 200 pounds, and 5-feet-8-inches tall. When discovered by Herman Gochenour, of 2745 4th st. ne., it was clad in a white undershirt and white shorts with blue stripes.

Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, district coroner, said the man apparently drowned while taking a cooling dip.

Suit by Georgian to Avoid Extradition Is Denied Here

Judge James W. Morris of District Court refused yesterday to prevent authorities from returning Louis Johnson, alias Lewis Kalap, 42, to Georgia where he faces a burglary charge.

The defendant contended that while imprisoned in Ocilla, Ga., last year facing trial, he was the victim of "cruel, barbaric and inhuman treatment."

Judge Morris ruled that if the fugitive wished to contest his detention on those grounds, he should do so before a Federal Court in Georgia and not here.

Philip Shapiro, Johnson's attorney, announced that he will appeal. Such action would stay the extradition until decision.

According to Shapiro, Johnson was flogged and denied food and bedclothing for a period because he would not pay $2500 to his alleged victim in the burglary. Johnson escaped jail on November 3, 1948, 10 months after his arrest but before trial, the court was told.

Letters Urge Cleanup Drive In Alexandria

Alexandria health officials yesterday launched an educational program in an effort to clean up unsanitary conditions in the city.

Dr. T. F. McGough, city health officer, said his department already had used education to clean up an alley in the 200 block of S. Pitt st.

The alley, he said, was littered with debris and garbage was mixed with trash and placed in open-top cans.

The department sent letters to residents in the area, Dr. McGough said, telling them the conditions violated city sanitation laws and asking them to cooperate in keeping the city clean.

Similar letters will go to other residents where unsanitary conditions are found, he said. "Only as a last resort will we take legal action," he said.

Dr. McGough's announcement came a day after Police Court Judge James R. Duncan told the city's health officials to "get busy" against violators. The judge made his remarks in evicting tenants from five alley garages lacking sanitary facilities.

VA May Take Over

2 Claimants For Body in Impasse

The District Court dispute as to who is entitled to bury Nathaniel Nuttingham reached an impasse yesterday.

Two claimants, each with her own undertaker, refused to give an inch, and it was beginning to appear that the funeral services may be conducted by the Veterans Administration.

Mr. Nuttingham, a war veteran about 30, died July 3 of a stab wound. Authorities said they could find no next of kin. Robert Robinson, undertaker, 1313 6th st. nw., sued to compel the District Morgue to surrender the body to him. The other undertaker in the case is Taft Williams.

A woman who claims the body as Nuttingham's foster-mother, and another woman who said she was his landlady, hired the undertakers, authorities said. Judge David A. Pine heard part of the case yesterday and ordered the rival groups to try to reach agreement.

Attorney Ben Lindas, who represents Robinson, said all efforts had failed. Neither undertaker would agree to relinquish his claim, nor would either split the profits, he said.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald denied reports he would turn the body over to a medical school. He said he will release it to anyone the court directs, but if the court makes no decision by Monday, and there is still no valid claimant, the remains will be turned over to the Veterans Administration. The body must be out of the morgue by Monday.

Judge Pine said he would request that a hearing be given the case this morning.

"We don't want to send this man to potter's field if we can help it," he said.

A VA spokesman said that agency would see Nuttingham got a "decent burial" in Arlington Cemetery if MacDonald ruled there was no valid claimant. If Nuttingham is buried privately, the undertaker can get up to $150 for the task.

Suspect Talks

$20,000 Bail Set in Acme Store Holdup

Edward W. Hoofler, 41, of Portsmouth, Va., was held yesterday in $20,000 bond for action of the grand jury on a charge that he robbed an Acme market at 1652 Columbia rd. nw., Thursday evening.

Police said he also freely admitted two robberies at Safeway markets on Wisconsin ave., one in January and one in May. Loot from those two totalled approximately $2650. He obtained $287.50 in the robbery Thursday, but was caught in the boiler room of a nearby apartment, with the money.

Hoffler appeared yesterday before Municipal Judge Thomas D. Quinn, who set the bond and ordered him held.

In the robbery, Thursday, Hoffler herded four employes of the store and two customers toward an icebox. One customer escaped into the store basement, but he locked the other five in the box, then locked up the store with keys he took from John Lieb, 3202 10th st. nw., manager.

Pvts. Ernest G. McClanahan and John P. Gerardi, of the Tenth Precinct, who captured him, were praised yesterday by police officials. These disclosed that Private Gerardi, who is only 22 and has been on the force but 20 months, already had three commendations before Hoffler's capture.

Private McClanahan also has been commended several times, the last one for capture of a bandit who held up a streetcar at Mount Pleasant and Irving sts. nw., last summer.

Takoma Pk. Man To Face Charge of Zoning Violation

Roy C. Potts, 210 Maple ave., Takoma Park, retired Agriculture Department employe, is slated to appear in Takoma Park police court July 21, to answer charges of zoning violation.

Potts was served with a warrant at his home July 6, by Corpl. Samuel A. Foster of the Takoma Park Police on charges that he had converted a home he owns at 225 Cedar ave. into a multiple dwelling.

Last December the Takoma Park City Council was given a petition signed by 29 residents who complained of the alleged violation. The council at the time noted that the practice of converting individual houses to multiple dwellings was widespread, and took no action.

Fairfax Studying Water Problem

Town officials of Fairfax, Va., yesterday were considering means of averting a serious water shortage.

Mayor Robert D. Graham appointed Councilmen John Alexander and Albert Sherwood to investigate construction of a new well to add to the four now in use. A fifth well, dug last year, was unsatisfactory, Graham said.

The new well would cost about $6000 after the site was purchased, Graham said. No residents are now without water, he said, but the water supply is so low that immediate action is necessary.

2 Names Up For Chief of D. C. Guard

At least two choices for commander of the District National Guard have been submitted to Army Secretary Gordon Gray by a selection board, it was learned yesterday.

It was understood one name will be selected for recommendation to President Truman while the board's report is passing through Gray's office and that of Defense Secretary Louis Johnson. Mr. Truman will then nominate a candidate for approval by the Senate to succeed Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, who recently reached statutory retirement age.

While the board's choices were not disclosed, it was reported they came from the four officers already called before the board. They are:

Col. William H. Abendroth, former adjutant general of Idaho and now on active duty here with the Army's Civilian Components Board; Col. LeRoy S. Mann, commanding the District's 260th Anti-Aircraft Artillery Group; Col. Peyton G. Nevitt, adjutant general of the District Guard, and Col. Laidler B. Mackall, commanding the 113th Fighter Group, D. C. Guard.

The post of commander of the local guard carries the rank of brigadier general.

Former President Of Colts Marries Airman's Widow

Robert R. Rodenberg, former president and part-owner of the Baltimore Colts of the All-America Football Conference, yesterday married Mrs. Jean Henry, widow of Flight Lieut. Gordon Henry of the Royal Australian Air Force.

The wedding took place in Washington Street Methodist Church in Alexandria, with the Rev. Fred R. Chennault officiating.

Douglas Mode, a close friend, gave the bride away, with William J. McEvoy, vice president of Pan-American Airways, acting as best man.

Rodenberg, who headed a syndicate which bought the Colts' franchise in 1946, was deposed in March, last year. He said he and his bride will honeymoon "away from Washington" for 10 days.

He married Miss Anne Kiess, Washington society girl, in 1941, and was divorced by her in 1943.

The present Mrs. Rodenberg's husband was killed in action over the North Sea during World War II.

His father, William A. Rodenberg, who died in Michigan in 1937, served as a Republican Representative in Congress from 1903 to 1913 and from 1915 to 1923.

Hospitals Trim Chest Patient Charges 20%

Under Old Rate $482,460 Fund Would Hit Bottom By September

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

Washington Hospitals have agreed to a 20-per-cent cut in hospitalization charges to Community Chest-sponsored patients, it was announced last night.

The new payment rate of $8.80 instead of $11 for each adult in-patient day and $1.60 in place of $2 for each clinic visit or infant in-patient day is retroactive to June 1.

Chauncey J. Parker, Chest Federation president, announced the new agreement.

Will Split Balance

The agreement followed weeks of deliberations between hospital administrators and Chest officials on ways to stretch this year's badly depleted Chest hospitalization fund to the year's end.

Under the old rate, all agreed that unless there was an unexpected drop in hospital admissions the $482,460 allotted by the Chest for such services would be used up by September.

Under the new agreement, participating hospitals will share as a bonus any balance which may be left from the fund at the end of the year, Chest Federation officials stated.

Parker's announcement, it was stated, followed word from Walter N. Tobriner, president of the Metropolitan Hospital Council, that area hospitals would go along with the Chest by accepting 80 per cent of the old rate for the balance of 1949, as requested by Chest leaders.

Cooperation Praised

"This regrettable request had to be made of the hospitals by the Federation," President Parker said, "because the approximate 75-percent support of last year's Community Chest goal by the community made it impossible to provide more than $482,460 in the Federation hospitalization fund. Hospital officials are to be complimented for their cooperation.

"The net result is that the hospitals will serve Hospital Service Agency-certified patients for Chest payment at even a greater loss than they were sustaining under the full concession rate."

HSA, a nonprofit organization, serves as an accrediting agency to certify those Washington residents needing hospital care who are eligible for Chest financial support. Still under consideration is a proposal by the hospitals that they take over the activity to save its administrative and operative expenses.

Battle Victory Forecast at Rally In Alexandria

Dr. J. Fulmer Bright, former Richmond Mayor, speaking last night in Alexandria, predicted victory in the Virginia Democratic primary for State Senator John S. Battle, one of three candidates for the gubernatorial nomination.

Bright spoke at a lawn party given at the home of Clarence L. Simpson, 608 W. Braddock rd. He severely lashed Horace H. Edwards, one of Battle's opponents, who spoke in Alexandria the preceding night.

Edwards, while Mayor of Richmond, raised taxes by $2,225,000, including those on gasoline, water, electricity, amusements, machinery and wholesale and retail merchants tax, Bright said.

He charged Edwards' proposals for a sales tax for the State "would tax everybody for every meal and between meals from cradle to the grave."

Fares Reduced On Shore Flights

Reduced fares to resort points on Del-Mar-Va Peninsula and the Jersey coast will go into effect tomorrow, All American Airways announced yesterday.

The fare from Washington to Cape May, N. J., and Rehoboth Beach will be $9.50 instead of $12.40.

The fare from Washington to Salisbury, Md., near Ocean City, has been cut from $9.90 to $7.60, while the fare to Easton, Md., is reduced to $4.80 plus tax, the AAA announced.

Wife Helps

War Veteran Seeks Clews To Identity

Charles Clarence Storm's wife, Faye, yesterday went through another dogged and unrewarding effort to find out who her husband really is.

Storm

Apparently not so concerned himself—he's been considering that question most of his 33 years—Storm went fishing, as befits a man on vacation.

With his wife and four children, Storm, a Navy veteran, lives at 601 Perth pl., Silver Spring. He is employed by the Washington Gas Light Co. as a fitter. He lives a normal existence. But he doesn't know his real name. That he ever will grows less likely every day.

Boy Legally Baptized

Here is his story:

In April, 1916, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Storm of Frostburg, Md., saw an advertisement in a Cumberland paper from a destitute mother with a large family. The ad sought a home for the woman's infant son.

The Storms took the three-week-old infant into their home, but were unable to adopt the baby legally because the mother hoped some day to take him home. He was baptized Charles Clarence Storm in a Methodist Church in Cumberland.

Within a short time, however, personal reasons forced the Storms to give up the boy. He was placed in the care of Mrs. Eva Poulus, now of 2821 R st. se., Mrs. Storm's sister. She raised the boy.

Storm married in 1935. His wife has become as curious as he about his real identity. But they have been working on the problem without much headway.

Storm knows his original foster mother died in 1939. His foster father is believed to have returned to his native Illinois.

Only a Visit Recalled

And all Mrs. Poulos remembers about Storm's real mother is the time she took the boy to meet her at the Cumberland residence of a family named Thomas or Thompson—many years ago.

Storm and his wife, with their children and a neighbor, drove to Cumberland Thursday to investigate. They advertised in a paper there for interested persons to write Postoffice Box 109. But they learned nothing of value.

Yesterday Mrs. Storm called every person by that name in the Washington phone book. No luck.

Truck-Auto Crash Near Laurel, Md., Injures 2 Persons

Two persons were injured yesterday in a truck-auto crash on U. S. highway No. 1 near Laurel, Md., when a trailer-truck went out of control and crashed into a truck and three automobiles.

Mrs. Anna Kaznowski, 65, of Buffalo, N. Y., suffered severe face cuts when she was thrown against the windshield of a car driven by her son, Edward, 46.

William Gaitten, 50, of Columbus, Ohio, received a brain concussion and head and body cuts. He was in a car driven by his son-in-law, Charles G. Fowler, 24, also of Columbus.

Both Mrs. Kaznowski and Gaitten were admitted to Leland Memorial Hospital in Riverdale.

Maryland State police said the trailer-truck, driven by Charles E. Mayberry, 24, of Lynchburg, Va., crossed the white line in the middle of the highway, sideswiped a car, struck a smaller truck driven by Doshie Lee McGuire, 38, of Baltimore, and hit the Kaznowski and Fowler cars before coming to a halt against a billboard.

Perry Sentenced to 15 Months In Faked Food-Store Robbery

Roscoe Perry, 28, was sentenced by Judge James W. Morris yesterday to 15 to 45 months in prison for the $3000 hoax-theft of a Giant Food Store here.

Perry was charged with prearranging a fake robbery with Robert Garsh, 26, store manager, who pleaded guilty. Garsh was the key Government witness.

Perry, of 1924 12th st. nw., contended he was "framed" by Garsh and others. These people bore him a grudge, Perry said, because he influenced his brother, Aaron Perry, to quit prize fighting, here. Aaron Perry was under contract to Garsh's father, it was claimed.

In another case, Jacob Rubin, 52, a liquor store operator, of 4901 5th st. nw., was fined $500 and placed on probation for three years for operating a numbers lottery. Rubin was described as operator of the Embassy Liquor Store, 3125 Mount Pleasant st. nw.

According to police, undercover agents made a numbers play shortly before arresting Rubin in the liquor store.

Infant Death Rate Shows Rise Here

Infant mortality increased by 4.3 per thousand in the District for the first 26 weeks of 1949, figures released yesterday by the District Health Department showed.

Funeral services for Capt. Clement Foster Cotton, 51, USN (ret.), will be held today in Los Angeles, Calif.

Captain Cotton was killed in an automobile accident June 30 at Tulare, Calif. He had planned to live permanently in California following his retirement in 1947.

A 1921 graduate of the Naval Academy, Captain Cotton served in the fields of engineering and materials research and was credited with several important developments in naval aircraft.

Prior to his retirement he was assigned to the Bureau of Aeronautics as a member of the Joint Army-Navy board.

Playground Reply by Krug Due Monday

Interior Secretary J. A. Krug is expected to give his answer on Monday to the District Recreation Board's proposals for taking over the Interior Department's playground facilities here.

Krug's office announced last night that recreation board officials would meet in his office at 10 a. m. on Monday to work out details of the terms of transfer.

The recreation board's proposal, voted last Tuesday, reportedly uses language similar to the board's June statement of policy on segregation. In June, the board said it would make "every possible and realistic effort toward the removal of racial segregation in public recreation . . ."

The board would set up a new city-wide play area plan largely on the present segregated basis, with future changes in segregation policy permitted by a majority vote of the board.

Interior officials discussed the proposal on Wednesday and a spokesman said some details did not appear entirely satisfactory. A study of the plan will be completed by the time of the Monday meeting, a spokesman said yesterday.

A general agreement for the transfer of the recreation areas' operation to the board was reached on July 1 at a meeting in Krug's office between Interior and Recreation Board members.

This meeting followed the closing of the Anacostia swimming pool after a series of racial disturbances which occurred when Negroes attempted to swim there. The segregation policy of the Recreation Board and the nonsegregation policy of the Interior Department have been in conflict at six District swimming pools.

Antonelli, 56, who were allegedly connected with the Capital Food Co., 3416 9th st. ne., where the product was sold as "imported olive oil," according to the complaint.

Count Leone Fumasoni-Biondi, 48, former correspondent in Washington for Italian newspapers, died July 1 in Rome, Italy, according to word received here yesterday.

Biondi

Count Fumasoni-Biondi was correspondent for the Corriere della Sera of Milan from 1928 to 1931. In 1932 as correspondent of the Stefani News Service, he established his headquarters here and was accredited to the White House and the Capitol press galleries. From 1931 to 1933 he also was correspondent of the Gazzetta del Popolo of Turin.

He was a nephew of Pietro Cardinal Fumasoni-Biondi, cardinal prefect of the Congregation of the Propagation of the Faith in Rome and a former apostolic delegate to the United States.

The count was a native of Florence, but his early childhood was spent in Russia, where his father was an Italian consul. He was graduated from the University of Rome in 1925 and from the Sorbonne, Paris, in 1926.

In 1929 he toured the United States under auspices of the Carnegie Peace Foundation. That same year he married Miss Mary Maguire of New York, who died in 1933.

Ex-Rep. Meade Found Dead in Willard Hotel

Hugh Allen Meade, 42, Maryland Representative in the Eightieth Congress who was defeated in the Democratic primary last year, was found dead yesterday in his room at the Willard Hotel.

An autopsy will be performed by District Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald this morning, at the request of Mr. Meade's family in Baltimore. Dr. MacDonald told them by phone he believed death was due to a heart attack.

Homicide Detective Sergt. Clarence Winemiller said death was apparently due to natural causes. Dr. Henry W. Stout of Emergency Hospital, who pronounced him dead, said there were no marks of violence on the body.

Mr. Meade was identified by J. M. Crockett, credit manager of the hotel, who had known the former Representative for several years. Crockett said Mr. Meade, who lived in Baltimore and came to Washington almost every week, had checked in at the hotel Tuesday night.

Since the end of his term, he had served as general counsel for the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee.

His office made several calls to the hotel during the day when he failed to arrive for work. Fellow workers said he did not complain of illness when at work on Thursday.

Mr. Meade was found slumped in the bathroom by a maid, Mrs. Loretta Seeney of 1755 Swann st. nw., who called Crockett. The bed in Mr. Meade's room had not been slept in.

A native of Netcong, N. J., former Representative Meade began his political career as secretary to the late Gov. Albert C. Ritchie of Maryland shortly after he graduated from University of Maryland Law School in 1932. He was also a graduate of Loyola High School in Baltimore and Loyola College.

He was elected to the Maryland State Legislature in 1934, and two years later was appointed supervisor of assessments of Baltimore City. In 1938, he was appointed assistant attorney general of the State in charge of legislative work. He held this post for eight years, except for Navy service as a lieutenant (j. g.) in 1944 and 1945.

He resigned in 1946 to enter private law practice and to make his successful campaign for Congress. There he represented the Maryland Second District, including part of Baltimore City as well as the Counties of Baltimore, Carroll and Harford. His home was at 4411 N. Charles st., Baltimore.

He was a member of the Baltimore Bar Association, Maryland State Bar Association, Phi Kappa Sigma Fraternity, American Legion, Baltimore Country Club and the Merchants Club.

Survivors include his wife, the former Isabel Muth, and six children: Hugh A. Meade, jr.; Marsy Isabel, Charles Philip, Margaret Alice, James and John Meade.

Scott Hears His Sentence Read By Reluctant Judge—99 Years

Roanoke, Va., July 8 (AP).—Lee Scott today was sentenced to 99 years in the State Penitentiary at Richmond for slaying his high school classmate, Dana Marie Weaver, 16.

Judge Dirk A. Kuyk sentenced the choirboy and Eagle Scout in Hustings Court this morning after overruling a motion by T. Warren Messick, chief defense counsel, to set aside Saturday's jury verdict of first degree murder.

The defense attorney explained that Scott was anxious to get out of the Roanoke jail and begin serving his sentence so that he could "make something out of himself."

Hessick indicated that an appeal might be made to the State Supreme Court of Appeals and said that a definite decision will be made in about 20 or 30 days.

Judge Kuyk commented that it was "unpleasant to sentence a 16-year-old boy to a long term in prison." He then added in accordance with the jury's verdict he was sentencing Scott to 99 years in the State penitentiary.

Under Virginia laws Scott, who will be 17 in September, will be eligible for parole in 12 years. Sentences are reduced by one-third by good behavior.

There Were Stars Among the Standees To Felicitate Madame Minister Mesta

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

AT 12:03 p. m. yesterday in the Chief of Protocol's office at the State Department, Mrs. Perle Mesta of Rhode Island signed in triplicate Form 1041, a General Accounting affidavit. From that precise moment Mrs. Mesta began drawing her $17,500 annual salary as Minister to Luxembourg. On the desk was a long cardboard tube containing her official appointment. In flowing script the impressive document read:

Harry S. Truman
President of the United States of America
To Perle S. Mesta of Rhode Island
Greetings

Reposing special trust in your integrity and ability I do appoint you Minister to Luxembourg, authorizing you hereby to do and perform all such matters and things as to the said place or office do appertaining in as may be duly given you in charge hereafter and the said office to hold and exercise during the pleasure of the President of the United States during the time being——"

Turning to one of the photographers present, Madame Minister smiled: "You know what to do about my chin!"

All-Star Audience.

THIRTY-THREE minutes earlier Perle Mesta was sworn into office in the handsome beige and blue State Department Auditorium. Probably it was the briefest performance on record, played to "standing room" only. Every one of the 250 seats were filled and squads of photographers ringed the back wall, closing in to the dais after the oath had been given.

Mrs. Thayer

The all-star audience included diplomats, press, glittering official and military brass, a delegation of 12 from Oklahoma, Mrs. Mesta's erstwhile home State, 20 representatives of the Woman's National Party, who converged on 24-hour notice from such distant points as California and Florida.

Cream of the crop was Vice President Alben Barkley who was attired with unusual sobriety of neckwear and in a dark blue suit.

It was, but definitely, Pearl Mesta day!

The audience, arriving with unusual punctuality, had time to note a pile of flower boxes, several gaily wrapped gift packages and three jumbo baskets of blooms ranged along the dais. The center tribute, a mass of gladiolas, was tied with purple, white, gold ribbons, colors of the National Woman's Party.

Front row seats were occupied by Oklahoma's Gov. Roy Turner, prominent Oklahomans, and Rhode Island's astringently tongued Senator Theodore Francis Green. Top to toe, in deep brown, the Senator extended a well-pressed trouser leg, "See," he said, "I put on new socks specially for the occasion!"

Taking the Oath

SHORTLY before 11:30 Mrs. Mesta walked down the aisle escorted by Chief of Protocol Stanley Woodward. Secretary of State Dean Acheson followed close behind. Beside a small table beneath the dais stood Vice President Barkley. The photographers, in full if subdued cry, crowded down aisle, thus effectively shutting off view of the ceremony from many of the spectators.

Mrs. Mesta, removing a smart, intricately cuffed black satin glove, raised her right hand. Stanley Woodward, in clear, incisive tones, administered the oath.

"I, Perle Mesta of Rhode Island, do solemnly swear that I will support and defend the Constitution of the United States against all enemies, foreign and domestic; that I will bear true faith and allegiance to the same; that I take this obligation freely without any mental reservation or purpose of evasion; that I will well and faithfully discharge the duties of the office on which I am about to enter, SO HELP ME GOD."

Mrs. Mesta replied "I do."

Then Secretary of State Acheson stepped forward with the tube containing her commission. "On behalf of the President of the United States I present you with your commission as Minister to Luxembourg." The audience burst into spontaneous applause.

The Vice President, the Secretary of State and Mrs. Mesta were hustled onto the platform for a stint of photographs. The ordeal completed, everyone inched up to congratulate the newly made Minister to Luxembourg.

Picture in White and Black

FOR THE occasion Mrs. Mesta wore a new Hattie Carnegie outfit—a two-piece white shantung suit, a white felt hat, its irregular off-face brim lined with black velvet, black satin gloves, a small patent leather handbag and matching open-toed pumps stitched with white. A triple strand choker of baroque pearls encircled her neck, pearl button earrings, a diamond engagement ring and a square cut diamond little finger ring were other ministerial adornments. Her corsage was a single, deep purple orchid, sent by Mrs. Woodrow Wilson. The Secretary of State, whose sartorial perfection is admirable, had on a pin-stripe gray flannel, buttoned high across chest.

The ladies among those present had on their best summer finery. Many had slimmed startlingly from winter highs. Executive Director of the Women's Division of the Democratic National Committee India Edwards, having shelved 36 pounds, dared wear a gay print. Frieda Hennock, sole feminine member of the Federal Communications Commission, recently minus 14 pounds, looked Junior Miss in a black linen suit with white neckline inserts, a huge tulle-topped straw set straight on her blond curls.

Smartest among the Diplomatic Corps wives was Madame Rahim, wife of the Egyptian Ambassador, in a turquoise blue shantung suit. Mrs. Kenneth Royall, wife of the former Secretary of War, had on a brilliant Kelly green and brand new version of the Royall specialty, a fancily flowered hat. Mrs. "Chip" Robert was another choosing turquoise, a tailor-made silk suit printed with an all-over design of feathers.

Though the Luxembourg Minister and Madame Le Gallais were in Maine on vacation, the Diplomatic Corps was well represented by the French Ambassador and Madame Bonnet, the Belgian Ambassador, Baron Silvercruys; the Nowegian Ambassador, Mr. Munthe de Morgenstierne; the Egyptian Ambassador, Kamil Abdul Rahim Bey; the Italian Ambassador, Alberto Tarchiani; the Ambassador from India, Madame Pandit, serenely cool in a sari of palest gray subtly border striped in mauve, threaded with silver.

Cabinet Well Represented

THE CABINET was out in force. Mrs. John Snyder and her daughter, Drucie, were a duet in navy blue; Mrs. Gordon Gray, wife of the Secretary of the Army, wore navy blue linen, her small natural straw cloche trailing a navy blue net veil; Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Brannan were there, and Attorney General and Mrs. Tom Clark. Mrs. Clark was demurely pretty in dove gray shantung, a gray felt hat and an amusing handbag, made of tortoise shell colored plastic, box shaped with a gold hoop handle. Undersecretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Edward Foley were accompanied by Mrs. Foley's youngest daughter, Judy Bowdoin.

The Postmaster General and Mrs. Donaldson were there, too. They had sent a basket of red roses, one of the three on the dais.

Military brass included Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Harry Vaughan, Col. and Mrs. Anthony D. Biddle (Colonel Biddle has the unique distinction of having served simultaneously as Ambassador to some dozen countries), Col. and Mrs. R. Gilpin Ervin.

Other notables included Paul Hoffman and his deputy, Ambassador at Large William C. Foster; former Senator Ashurst, Col. Don Lowrie, former chief of the White House Aides, and Mrs. Palmer Mitchell.

Leslie Biffle, the Senate Secretary, quite outdid himself, in a tan sport coat, a black border yellow handkerchief to pick up the tones of his intriguingly jumbled tie design. Also there were Mrs. Agnes E. Wells, national chairman of the Woman's National Party (Mrs. Mesta is a member of the WNP board); Undersecretary of State Webb, Mrs. John Steelman.

Then the Press Club Party

BY FIVE O'CLOCK, many of those present at the State Department's swearing-in ceremony plus several hundred new starters, managed to run comb through hair, slip into fancier togs for the National Women's Press Club party-for-the-party-giver at the Mayflower.

To the disappointment of style-conscious guests hoping to gander at a new ensemble, the occasion's heroine received guests wearing a favorite sapphire blue lace dinner dress, a bandeau of flowers wreathing her hair, and a double corsage of gardenias and of pinky-white lilies. Mrs. Mesta was flanked by Jane Stafford, president of the Women's National Press Club, and by Hope Ridings Miller, chairman of the hospitality committee.

The newspaper gals plus the Mayflower went to town on decorations. In the foyer to the Chinese Room, a table fountain squirted orange juice in a delectable combination of coolth and temperance. The inner room buffet boasted a handsome triple decker gold epergne surrounded by smaller copies, all laden with fruit topped by a single pineapple. There was a new quirk, too, in tea party sandwiches, usually so unbearably dull or so poisonously colored. The chef, or possibly some inspired minion, had gone to end of effort to create a sandwich pieced together in the semblance of an American Flag. Red and white stripes, of course, and green crosses in lieu of stars. Nice to look at but, somehow, sacrilegious to eat! Tea and coffee were poured by shifts of prominent guests, each being relieved from duty with the punctuality of a sentry-go. Starting off were Mrs. Brannan and Senator Margaret Chase Smith, who were relieved by Mme. Henri Bonnet and India Edwards.

Stars of the Show

DURING the first round few males were visible. Later, possibly buoyed by outside sustenance, they began to trickle in. The Oklahoman contingent, headed by Gov. Roy Turner, Senator Kerr and Labor Mediator Judge Douglas, attracted the most female eye flutterings.

Stars of the party were Gen. Omar Bradley, a smoothie in cream colored linen and gray patterned crimson tie, and Mauricio Nabuco, the Brazilian Ambassador, who achieved a triumph by not spilling a jot of mayonnaise, a trickle of ice cream on his snowy white linen waistcoat. The State Department's top flight numero was Assistant Secretary John Purifoy whose practical seersucker suit was enlivened by a hand painted tie. Col. Don Lowrie, former chief of White House aides, put on a show for his hostesses, changing his early morning tie which featured gray dinosaurs on a red background, to a more politically significant cravet featuring yellow donkeys (with extra long ears) on a brown background. Admiral Woodward, whose distinguished forehead is permanently tatooed by a small, blue powder-burn, was the only male who prided in not having primped between festivities. Though Vice President Barkley was not present, he was ably represented by his son-in-law (and daughter!) Douglas McArthur II.

The Secretary of Agriculture was there, urbane, smiling, full of pleasant information, such as an item picked up casually—reindeer have terrible dispositions but there's nothing to equal for delicacy a reindeer filet mignon! Former Secretary of War Kenneth Royall, towered above all competition, on occasion bending from height to lend attentive ear or deposit a cosy buss on lady's cheek. Senator George Malone ring-around-a-rosied with the Oklahoma boys, and Laurance Spivak, impresario of radio's "Meet the Press" was fairly inundated with chattering females.

Husbands of literary ladies were out in good number, nattiest being Hugh, helpmeet of Elise Morrow, who matched the blue of his nylon tie with the pattern of his tweed jacket. In from Hollywood was Harry Goetz, in from Georgetown, jack Logan, in from the Mayflower Lounge, Frank Rediker.

The Minister to Luxembourg made a neatly turned thank-you speech and Perle Mesta Day ended on high, successful note.

Mrs. Mesta plans a whirlwind business trip to Pittsburgh and Oklahoma City, a week or more in Washington being briefed in her new duties, then a short breather before arriving in Luxembourg around September first.

Buckeyes Buy Block of Symphony Seats

It Will Be Ohio Night on the Potomac

By Nicha Soure

SINCE Buckeyes like to get together and the Ohio Night baseball game between the Washington Senators and the Cleveland Indians was a "crackerjack event," the Ohio Society has another idea up its sleeve.

For the all-Gershwin Watergate Concert of the National Symphony Orchestra on July 27 the society has bought a block of 200 reserved seats for the Ohioans. The Buckeyes-sitting-together idea proved so successful in the case of the Ohio night baseball game on June 23 that hundreds of people had to be turned down because of lack of space.

So again it will be on a "first come, first served" basis for the concert to be conducted by Howard Mitchell, with Miss Jane Pickens as guest soloist. Orchestral selections include many of the favorites from "Porgy and Bess" and Abba Bogin, pianist, will play "Rhapsody in Blue." Among the songs Miss Pickens will sing are "Love Is Sweeping the Country," "Embraceable You" and "The Man I Love."

The Ohio State Society states that "there will be no summer slump in our activities. The Ohio night baseball game encouraged us to keep our program alive for the busy stay-at-homes during the hot weather. All who might enjoy attending the concert with the Ohio group are urged to call the secretary, John S. Bartlett, at Michigan 0860, for tickets."

WITH the warm weather definitely here, two State societies have planned outdoor get-togethers.

The Maryland State Society will hold a picnic at Pierce Mill, Rock Creek Park, from 6 to 11 p. m. July 22. All members, their families and friends, are invited to attend.

A delicious caterer-served picnic dinner will be the main attraction of the picnic, with softball, horse shoes, swings and games for the children as added features.

Attendance should be confirmed by calling the State society treasurer, Roy May, at Chestnut 6149; the society president, Mrs. Winifred Grant, Emerson 1439; or the executive secretary, William Clay, Johnson 3-5923.

The picnic will be an annual outing for the Maryland State group, which was reactivated this spring, and for the first time since the war is planning and holding regular monthly meetings.

Another State, North Dakota, is scheduling a picnic in Rock Creek Park.

The North Dakota State Society will hold a picnic at Grove No. 12 at 2 p. m. July 17. North Dakotans will pack their own picnic baskets and the society will provide watermelons and soft drinks. The entertainment committee is planning horseshoe, softball and other contests, with slides and swings available for the youngsters.

This will be the last State society event on the North Dakota calendar until fall.

TWO State society events are slated for July 15.

The New Hampshire State Society and the University of New Hampshire Alumni Association will sponsor a dance at the Terrace Room of the Washington National Airport. Dancing will be from 9:30 p. m. to 12:30 a. m. to the music of Jack Morton's orchestra. Tickets to the dance are available at the New Hampshire Congressional delegation offices.

On the same day the Louisiana State Society sponsored Bossier City High School Band will present a musical program at 8 p. m. in the Department of Commerce auditorium. The band, en route to the Lions International Convention in New York, will stop over in Washington for a sightseeing trip and to present the band program. Representative Overton Brooks will act as master of ceremonies on the musical program which will be in honor of the Louisiana congressional delegation.

D. C. Legion Auxiliary to Meet July 21

The 24th annual convention of the District of Columbia Department, American Legion Auxiliary, will be held at the Commerce Auditorium at 8:15 p. m. on July 21, 22 and 23.

Mrs. Lillian M. Judd, convention chairman, will be assisted by Mrs. Sarah Deery, chairman of badges and convention treasurer; Mrs. Doris Pruitt, chairman of pages; and Mrs. Bertha Fichthorn, convention secretary.

Mrs. LaScola Heads Police, Fire Unit

Mrs. Beulah LaScola was re-elected president of the Police and Fire Unit No. 29, American Legion Auxiliary at a recent meeting.

Serving with Mrs. LaScola will be Mrs. Lou Clements, Mrs. Catherine Crompton and Mrs. Mary Hargraves, vice presidents; Mrs. Olive Miller, chaplain; Mrs. Cora Drake, historian; Mrs. Mary M. Jones, sergeant-at-arms; Miss Marie Brown and Miss Gertrude Kizini, color-bearers.

Delegates to the department convention on July 21 will be Mrs. Beulah LaScola, chairman; Mrs. Grace Comingore, Mrs. Olive Miller, Mrs. Edith Armstrong, Mrs. Catherine Crompton, Mrs. Lillian Manning, Mrs. Blanche Joy, Mrs. Mary M. Jones, Mrs. Emma Sheehan and Mrs. Maude Hood.

Mrs. Margaret Carroll, Mrs. Rose Perkins and Miss Courtney Newton will be delegates at large to the convention.

James Reese Unit To Hold Election

Mrs. Pearl Chapman, present president, will preside at a meeting of the James Reese Europe Unit No. 5 at 8 p. m. July 13 at 1314 Vermont ave. nw.

The business program will include the annual election of officers and the election of delegates and alternates to the department convention on July 21.

About Bleaching Nylon Material

Can you tell me the best way to bleach nylon? M. W. S.

Nylon can be bleached satisfactorily with sodium perborate. Use 4 tablespoons of the perborate (buy the unflavored kind in drug-stores) to a pint of lukewarm, soapy water. Soak the material in this solution for 30 minutes, then wash thoroughly in the suds and rinse thoroughly.

I have new metal glasses and I am most anxious to acquire a frost on the top edge (or all over for that matter) before I serve cold drinks. How can this be done? R. J. H.

You can get a frosted appearance around the top edge of the glass in the following manner: Dampen edge with either water or lemon juice, then dip lightly in granulated sugar. About the all-over frosting, this should be the genuine article. If the drink lends itself to such treatment, you should be able to attain a frost by first chilling the glasses thoroughly in the refrigerator, then packing it with crushed ice, pouring in the concentrated beverage and stirring with all your might until a frost forms on the outside. Be sure not to touch the outside of the glass while you're doing this, as this destroys the frost.

I'd like to know if clothing sizes in France are the same as in the United States. I heard that they mark their clothes differently. If so, what is equivalent to a size 12 dress or a 34 size sweater? A. L.

The equivalent of our size 12 dress would be 42 in France. And according to a lady at the French Embassy, the 34 sweater would also be a 42.

How can we get rid of pigeons that roost around our house, (roof, eaves, etc.)? They make an awful mess, clog the gutters and ruin our roof. R. C.

Pigeons can be dislodged by repeatedly playing the garden hose on them. With such treatment they will soon go away.

Another idea suggested by Roger B. Whitman in his book "First Aid for the Ailing House" (pub. Whittlesey House, McGraw Hill Book Co., Inc., New York) is to use toy snakes to frighten them away. He says, "One or two of the variety of toy snakes made of blocks of wood tied together and placed along the roof or along cornices where the birds usually collect will have the effect of driving the pigeons off without harm to the birds, for the movement of these snakes in the wind is very lifelike.

New Unit Named For Chaplain Poling

Mrs. J. Florence Dietsche, D. C. Department president, has forwarded a charter for the newly organized Clark V. Poling Unit No. 64, American Legion Auxiliary, to Indianapolis for approval.

The new unit is named for the Rev. Clark V. Poling, one of the four chaplains who died when the U.S.S. Dorchester was sunk in the Pacific.

Temporary officers of the new unit are Mrs. Clara Newton, president; Mrs. Catherine Dills, first vice president; Mrs. Helen Gay, second vice president and secretary; and Mrs. Robert Davis, treasurer.

An excellent 200-acre farm, 600 ft. frontage, on route 97 (Olney-Brookville Pike). There are 50 acres in magnificent woodland, much virgin timber, through which the unimproved road winds. The balance of the land is under cultivation or in pasture.

THREE original stairs are continuous to the 3d floor and are charming. The residence has to be modernized but would justify a generous expenditure.

Myopic Slayer Fills His Eyes to Blind, Dies in Chair

Ossining, N. Y., July 8 (U.P.).—A waterfront gunman, whose poor sight once caused him to murder the wrong man, willed his eyes to be blind before he died last night in Sing Sing's electric chair, prison officials said today.

Corneas from the eyes of Andrew Sheridan, 47, who had said murder was as simple as "ordering a cup of coffee," were sent to an eyebank immediately after his execution.

Sheridan and John Dunn, 38, his complice in the January 8, 1947, murder of boss stevedore Anthony Antz, went to the electric chair shortly after 11 p. m. last night. They had been offered reprieves if they would tell what they knew about 20 to 30 other waterfront murders, but both refused.

Lafferey Confirmed

Czech Reds Say Kids Now Shun Being Al Capone

Prague, July 8 (AP).—Czech children "no longer play at being Al Capone or cruel American Indian chiefs," the official Communist newspaper proudly noted today. Under the new regime "they play they are workers' heroes."

The newspaper, Rude Pravo, said this change had come over the nation's youth since the Communists took over last year.

"Now children at play are heard to shout 'I am Toncar' or 'I am Andula Vackova' instead of 'I am Al Capone or 'I am an Apache chief,'" the paper said.

Toncar and Miss Vackova are Czech workers hailed by the Communist government for exceeding production quotas.

Hirohito Visits Mac

Tokyo, July 8 (AP).—Emperor Hirohito made a courtesy call on General MacArthur today at the United States Embassy. The subject of their conversation was not disclosed.

The Lyons Den By Leonard Lyons

MAJ. GEN. HARRY VAUGHAN, the President's military aide, tells this story about the three mice at Blair House who broke into the presidential wine cellar and sampled some of the wine. After they had finished several bottles, and staggered around the cellar, the first mouse said, "I am going upstairs and tell off that Mr. Truman." The second mouse said: "And I'm getting a DC-6 and fly it to Moscow and tell off that Mr. Stalin" . . . The third mouse said: "And while you two are telling off Truman and Stalin, I'll step into the next room and chew up the cat."

Lyons

DURING Governor Dewey's trip to England he was at a luncheon with Winston Churchill and some other Tory leaders. The hosts discussed poitical campaigning and how Britain's high income tax rate will affect the future campaign . . . BBC allots time to all the political parties, and so there is a fair apportionment, without cost. A great deal of money, however, is spent in posters. The Labor Party doesn't have as much expense for posters, because the union men usually contribute their time and labor. But the Tories no longer can raise the money, because after taxes are paid they haven't enough to contribute.

MERVYN LEROY, the MGM producer-director, was invited to spend the weekend at the Westchester farm of Molly Parness, the designer. He and Mrs. Leroy went to a delicatessen shop to buy some sturgeon and bagels, and then drove up in an MGM car, which is equipped wit' a telephone. A half hour after they left New York, Leroy telephoned his hostess and told her: "Before you prepare dinner, I want to tell you we're bringing the bagels" . . . When the Leroys arrived they discovered that Miss Parness had set two extra plates at the table—for Mr. and Mrs. Bagel.

BURNETT HERSHEY is telling the story of the 3d ave. postman delivering a large batch of mail along his route, in the midst of the heat-wave. He paused for breath at a 3d ave. saloon, where one of his friends invited him inside for a glass of beer. "No," said the postman. "It's against the rules to drink while on duty" . . . His friend, who already had had six beers, again urged the postman to drink with him . . . "I will," the postman promised, "as soon as I deliver these last 50 letters" . . . "Aw, don't bother deliverin' em," said the drunk. "Jush mail 'em."

MAYOR O'DWYER has sent word that if he disapproves of the mayoralty candidates selected by the Democrats, he may run as a fusion nominee . . . Governor Duff of Pennsylvania now is at odds with Harold Stassen, and refers to him as a carpetbagger . . . Local 42 of the Hotel and Restaurant Union has set up a blood-bank for its members . . . Henry Luce, who edits one edition of Times magazine each year, for the first time edited an issue of Life—the current issue.

THE story current in Italy is of the counterfeiters in the province of Catania, who have worked at this profession for many generations. So proficient are they and so quickly do they work that as soon as the Americans landed at Anzio Beach, Catania became busy counterfeiting Occupation money . . . And so, at a recent cabinet meeting, when a finance expert mentioned that the budget was several million lira out of kilter, and suggestions were made for balancing it, one cabinet member said: "As a last resort, there's always Catania."

LAST week, on the day before the Nieuw Amsterdam docked in New York, William Saroyan sat alone at a table in the ship's dining room. Another man sat down next to him, and said: "Have you heard that William Saroyan is aboard?" Saroyan identified himself . . . The man said he was a jeweler, and all of his life dreamed of being a writer. "A jeweler, eh?" said Saroyan. "That's strange — because all my life I've been a writer and dreamed of earning enough from writing to be able to get one of those little Bull Durham bags full of diamonds."

HELEN HAYES does all her speech-making and writing without any help from her husband, Charles MacArthur. He tried ghost-writing for her only once, when she was invited to participate in a panel on censorship. MacArthur immediately reached for the Encyclopedia Brittanica, digested some portions about censorship, and delivered the script to Miss Hayes. . . . When he went to the New Amsterdam Theater to listen to the panel-discussion, he heard the first five speeches—all digests of the same Brittanica excerpts . . . "Honey," he told Miss Hayes, as he rushed away, "you're on your own."

MARCUS FAULKNER CUNLIFFE, the British author, married Mitzi Solomon, the sculptress, in New York this week. During their honeymoon the bride will complete one of her commercial assignments—sculpting shoulder-pads . . . Their wedding ceremony was a unique one in which three of their friends participated—one reciting the "Song of Songs," the second reciting T. S. Eliot and the third reciting a poem of E. E. Cummings.

A RECENT arrival from Hungary discussed the new fence around the border because so many had been fleeing into Austria, and of the cow story now popular in Budapest: It's about the two men who disguised themselves with cowhide, to sneak across the border. One of them told the other: "We'd better run for our lives . . ." "Why?" asked his friend. "Have the frontier-police spied us? . . ." "No," was the answer, "but here comes a bull."

Bill Gold is on his vacation and will resume "The District Line" July 18.

Esso Reduces Fuel Oil Price By Half a Cent

As an incentive to summer purchases of fuel oil, Esso Standard Oil Co. has offered a special discount of half a cent a gallon, it was announced yesterday by C. A. Newland, manager of the company's division here.

Present price, including the discount, is 10.6 cents a gallon. Top price last winter was 12.3 cents a gallon. In the past, other oil companies have followed Standard Oil's lead on prices.

The company has offered a discount of 0.6 cents a gallon to dealers why buy from it and supply consumers. The discount rate will continue until September 30, and if further price reductions occur, all purchasers will be protected by a retroactive discount, Newland said.

Col. Yager Takes Veterinary Post At Walter Reed

Lieut. Col. Robert H. Yager assumed command this week as director of the Veteranary Division Army Medical Department Research and Graduate School.

He replaced Col. Raymond Randall, 00-year head of the division, who left Wednesday for his new post at Camp Detrick, Md.

For the last year, Colonel Yager was a visiting investigator at the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research in New York. His new assignment marks his fourth at Walter Reed. He was first assigned there in 1932 as an enlisted man; in 1940, he returned as an officer student, and in 1947 he served there as assistant chief of laboratories, Veterinary Division.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Mississippian Accused as Unfair

By Drew Pearson

Gregarious, white-thatched Congressman Bill Whittington of Mississippi is in a strategic spot as chairman of the Public Works Committee, to see that his State is not left behind when Federal funds are ladled out for water conservation, rivers and harbors, and flood control. Mississippi ranks eighth in getting these improvements.

Whittington

However, the Congressman is a strong believer in economy for other States. When Washington, which ranks sixteenth, and Oregon, eighteenth, and are partly arid, request water control funds, they get nowhere with Whittington. When Charles Hodde, speaker of the Washington House of Representatives, testified for the proposed Columbia Valley Authority in the Northwest, Whittington interrupted constantly.

"We know what you're here for," he said, "more Federal money. Why can't your State undertake the necessary development?"

Testimony by Oregon State Senator Vernon Bull met similar rebuffs. Whittington is a militant foe of the Columbia Valley Authority, though 35 Mississippi counties benefit from the similar Tennessee Valley Authority. So, as Bull took the stand, Whittington asked if he had testified before the Senate. Bull replied that he had not.

Whittington (to clerk recording testimony): "This is off the record." (Then to Vernon Bull): "Good, then we'll get rid of you fast. Are you in favor of this proposed CVA legislation?"

Bull: "Yes, sir, I am. I believe that the people of the Northwest——"

Whittington (irritably): "Yes, yes, we've heard all that. Now give us your reasons—one, two, three."

Note—Whittington's curt treatment of these witnesses probably won't show up in the official record. As chairman, he has complete censorship over testimony, can revise or delete his own remarks.

Vice Presidential Humor

Here is one story which Vice President Alben Barkley doesn't tell, but which his friends tell on him.

It goes back to World War I when Barkley, then a member of the House of Representatives from Kentucky, was touring the Allied battle fronts with a group of Congressmen. The party included Representative Marvin Jones of Texas, now chief justice of the United States Court of Claims; Representative Charles H. Randall of California, Representative Martin Welling of Utah, and Barkley himself.

Arriving in London, the congressional committee found itself booked by the United States Embassy for a trip into the British countryside early the next morning. So, placing their shoes outside the door to be shined, according to standard British custom, the party went to bed, leaving calls for 6:30 a. m.

But about 3 a. m. the irrepressible Barkley got up, telephoned Congressman Welling's room and in a broad English accent announced:

"The carriage awaits without."

Hastily, Welling dressed, couldn't find his shoes, but rushed down five flights of stairs of the swank Savoy Hotel in stocking feet to ask the sleepy night clerk to find his shoes and meanwhile to hold the carriage.

The joke furnished London much merriment and even Welling enjoyed it. To this day, when Barkley and Marvin Jones, Randall or Welling meet, their greeting is: "The carriage awaits without."

Moscow's Memory

The story can now be told of how the Soviet government schemed to dismember Czechoslovakia following the war.

It can be told because Gen. Heliodor Pika is dead, executed last week by a Communist government firing squad. But the story was not buried with him.

Pika, recently deputy chief of staff of the Czechoslovak army, had been military attache in Moscow during the war. It was there he heard of the Soviet plan to reduce his country to a group of small states, as it had been before the Masaryk-Wilson concept of a union of the Czechs and Slovaks.

Immediately Pika got word out of Moscow to President Benes in London. Benes promptly cabled Molotov and Stalin, asking for an explanation.

The Soviets then started an investigation to determine who had leaked the story, and eventually pinned down Pika as the source.

But the memory of Moscow is long. And when the Communists took over Czechoslovakia, Pika was tried, and a few days ago sentenced to be shot. The sentence was brief, but it meant a great deal to the few people who knew. It read: "He was an enemy of the Soviet Union."

GRIN AND BEAR IT — By Lichty

"We're just planning a pleasure trip to Europe . . . but if there's any spying we could do in the line of duty . . ."

I don't know whether Ed Prichard, the so-called "wonder boy" of the New Deal, is guilty of ballot stuffing down in Kentucky or not. But I do know what Prich was guilty of in Washington during the war and the reason he got cussed out even more than if he had stuffed ballot boxes.

Prich was the right-hand man to Fred Vinson, now Chief Justice, during those grim and hectic war days when labor wanted to raise wages, manufacturers wanted to raise prices, the housewife couldn't get enough of hardly anything, and when all groups took their grumbling out on the Office of Economic Stabilization.

Vinson, the economic stabilizer, was a Rock of Gibraltar in that battle. But his right bower and frequent punching bag was Ed Prichard. In fact, Prich probably got cussed out even more than Vinson, because Vinson was viewed—mistakenly—as an easygoing gentleman, a prisoner of the young men around him, chiefly Prich.

If the country had followed Vinson and his urging and kept prices and wages where they were, we would not now be suffering the uncertainty of recession.
